THERE'S ECONOMY FOR YOU

In our Cash only method. Did you ever think that the merchant who allows credit loses— 1st. The use of his money for a time. 2nd. Something by bad debts. 3rd. The command of the market that ready money gives. Did you ever think that if such a merchant is to continue in business he must charge enough more to you, who pay him, to balance his losses by those who do not pay him, and to even up for the extra cost of his goods? We have heard surprise expressed that we could mark certain goods so low. There's no mystery about it, no secret. We begin by getting the littlest prices that we know how and command of the markets permits. We put a very modest profit on the things and pass them along to you. If the prices are notably lower than you are used to it is simply because our method of doing business is notably different.

Think of Men's Real Linen Handkerchiefs at 5c each.

GOT TWENTY-THREE MONTHS.

Curtis, The Would-Be Murderer, Cared For By Col. Duff. At the police court this morning Annie Carroll and Jennie McGranahan were charged with vagrancy, with street walking and were said to be unable to give satisfactory accounts of themselves. The first named said she was in the employ of a Wolfe Island farmer. She had been given leave of absence for two days, come to the city to see the sights on Monday and Tuesday and was about returning when arrested. She could produce witnesses to affirm her statements. Constable McCullagh said many complaints had been made about the prisoner. She was known to the police as a bad character, to work upon the sympathies of respectable citizens. Some time ago a ticket was purchased for her to return to her home at Elginburg. The magistrate remanded her until Monday, and in the meantime will ascertain if the Wolfe Island farmer mentioned will take her back to work.

Jennie McGranahan said that two weeks ago she went out to work for a farmer near Bath. She was not treated right. The magistrate said she had been employed all winter. If the girl was given a chance she thought she would be able to do better. Jennie promised to go home and be a good girl. The magistrate adjudged her guilty of the charge, but referred her to the reformatory, where she would have to be brought in and would send her to the Mercer reformatory, where she had been once before. Joseph W. Curtis, found guilty of unlawfully attempting to shoot George Zeigler, was brought in for sentence. Before passing sentence the magistrate gave the prisoner a severe lecture, saying, "It is a serious thing for a man of your character to go tramping about the country with a loaded revolver in your possession. You had no need of a revolver and carried it only for what harm you could do. On Monday you committed three crimes, the first being that of breaking the statute prohibiting the carrying of concealed weapons. It is no fault of yours that one or more precious lives were not taken by you. You have said that you did not intend to discharge the revolver, but your acts speak louder than your words and it is by your acts that you must be judged. The law is very severe on this matter, providing for a life sentence. I do not want to go as far as that with you, but I desire to impose a sentence that will serve as a lesson to you and others of your class. I will sentence you to one year and eleven months in the central prison." The prisoner did not say a word but left court with his head down. As he will have to serve one month for pointing a revolver at constable Lawson, Curtis will have two years in all to serve.

THE TARIFF CHANGES.

A diversity of opinion prevails in regard to the tariff changes. They have been made after a due consideration of all the facts, as presented and discussed by protected interests, and without any confession that the original draft was a clerical error or result of weakness. Still the conservative papers whine and find fault, and clearly demonstrate that in any case they will not be pleased. The Montreal Star, a protectionist journal of the most pronounced type, is more honest and candid than the conservative papers and so observes: "A general view of them leaves the impression that Mr. Fielding has been more anxious about the integrity of our national industries than concerned about the national revenues, which should excite gratitude in the breasts of the industrious toward a minister who might have considered himself pledged to regard the revenues only. The amendment to the preferential clause, empowering the government to observe the British trade treaties, is an exhibition of frankness which the first draft of the tariff sadly lacked. There can be no doubt that, whether we like it or not, the danger of having to admit German and Belgian goods on the same terms as British products, exists; and it is only common honesty to the people to admit the fact, and provide for the contingency. The proposal to modify the "anti-trust" clause by calling in a judicial authority to deliver judgment before anything is done, is certainly to be commended. This is not a power that should be left in the hands of any political body—short of parliament in open session; for when elections draw nigh and the party hat is going round, few politicians are in a judicial frame of mind." The resolution of Sir Charles Tupper is a curiosity. He intimates that the liberal government has to back down on the preferential clause, that, as a conservative print puts it, he has had to crawl. But there is nothing indicative of this in Mr. Fielding's speech or manner. The government acted without consultation with the colonial office in the first place, and felt then, as it feels now, that the German and Belgium treaties are not binding upon the colonies of Great Britain, and especially upon Canada. But the government must provide for contingencies, for the emergency of a decision against it on this point, and it amends the clause so that this emergency will be met. That's all that has been done; and it partakes of neither a "crawl" or a "back down."

Of course Sir Charles Tupper moved an amendment. It was to the effect that when Great Britain is free to treat for preferential trade Canada will be ready for action. Which means, if anything, that Sir Charles wants to put off preferential trade, to turn his back upon what he has been preaching for years, to talk nonsense when he ought to talk sense. His suggestion that a bargain ought to be made with Great Britain by Canada, on the head of its concessions, is simply moonshining. The mother country may or may not be able to make such a bargain as he talks about, but that does affect the tariff clause as it stands, and Canada is weary of a hostile tariff, one that has operated against British trade, one that was enforced with the threat that if British connection could not stand it so much the worse for British connection.

So there is to be a canteen in connection with the volunteer camp. It's a mistake and one the government cannot too soon rectify. What is more to the purpose is a reading tent where men can spend their leisure hours in elevating occupations. The liberal government should lead in this as in other reforms.

BORDEN MAY RETIRE.

Minister of Militia May Find Active Duties Quite Impossible. Private advices received in Toronto give good reports concerning the health of Hon. Dr. Borden, minister of militia. According to them the injury to his constitution resulting from the accident on the Intercolonial railway is far more serious than was at first supposed. His nervous system is so badly shaken that he may be unable to resume his duties as minister of militia. In any case, should he return to his post, it will only be for a time, and then only until a successor is appointed. Rumor names D. C. Fraser, of Guyabro', or Col. Donville, as the successor for the position, the former being the favorite.

Tendered a Purse.

Yesterday a number of citizens presented Lieut. Col. W. M. Drennan with a purse in recognition of his services in connection with the recent election. No one deserved such attention more than the energetic secretary of the citizens' committee. Upon him rested almost the entire work in connection with the celebration, and his success testifies to the thoroughness with which he performed the arduous duties of his office.

Dr. Clarke has not been an aspirant for the penitentiary wardenship, has not given the slightest encouragement to the use of his name, and his position as superintendent at Rockwood is preferable to that of warden in any way. THE GARDEN-PLOT SCHEME.

Enquiry has been made as to why the garden-plot scheme has not been proceeded with. The WHIG has become possessed of the facts. The matter was referred to the finance committee, and it was supposed to confer with a committee of citizens. Subsequently the finance committee appointed three of its members to advertise for offers of land and for applications from those who were willing to work it. That sub-committee does not seem to have had a meeting, and does not seem to have done anything, so that the chances now are that the scheme may have to be dropped for this year. The mayor, by virtue of his office, is the chairman of the finance committee and of its sub-committee, and no one can courtously assume to press him into the performance of his duty; but the feeling prevails that, finding his time otherwise occupied, he should have delegated the duty of developing the garden plot scheme to some one else. "The need of helping the poor to help themselves may not be so apparent now as it will be by-and-by, when social functions will be at a discount in the presence of a condition of things that cannot be removed or satisfied by any expression of pity."

THE FRAMP NUISANCE.

With the fine weather the tramps have become very numerous. The usual brigade of land and tie travellers have been joined for the summer by many who have no desire for hard work and find an absolute pleasure in vagabond life. The tendencies of this career are hardening. The evidence of this is supplied in the crimes which are committed, in the robberies to which they make resort in their extremities. The murderer of poor McLeod in Napanee did not mean to shoot anyone, but, disturbed in his nefarious business, he used the weapon of a coward; and to-day he is seeking the light from bible study that, secured before, would have made him, in all probability, a respected if not an honored citizen. The tramp nuisance must be checked, and if possible suppressed. A by-law should be passed under provision of which the idlers may be given not only shelter but work in return for the same. This work should be done in our streets, in our drains, anywhere so long as it means task, burden, muscle movement. Moreover the people of our city must be warned against the entertainment of these men. It is a mistake to take them in and feed them. They have very plausible tales. But not one out of a dozen tells the truth, and, having properly imposed upon the citizens, they advertise their luck so that it may be shared by others of their fraternity. So the city is being overrun by a worthless, thieving, vagabondish gang whose spirit was fairly emphasized in the proceedings of Monday. Then a brewery was taken possession of, and if blood was not spilled the fault was not the tramps'. Let us have an end of this lawlessness, with an end of sympathy for tramps.

Mr. Birmingham, who was grand secretary for the Orange lodge, was a hero in his office until he undertook to register the Orange lodges in favor of the remedial bill and discipline Grand Master Wallace. Then he began to slide downwards, and he has been sliding ever since.

Bob Birmingham wept as he read his farewell in the Grand Orange Lodge in Windsor. He was threatened with opposition at a defeat, should he again run for the office of grand secretary, and he surprised his enemies by offering a tearful resignation.

The Winnipeg Tribune says
