which they were formerly connected. March 25th, 1819, the Royal Arch chapter of Upper Canada granted a charter to John Butterworth, Benjamin Olcott and Thomas Smith, designating this chapter the "Frontenac chapter, No. 1," being in confirmation of the dispensation under which it had been working since February 9th, 1818. Judging from a circular issued by the grand chapter on February 8th, 1819, the Frontenac chapter must have been n a flourishing condition, as the receipts for this chapter for one year, as returned, amounted to £54, 3d. On October 24th, 1859, Ancient Frontenac Royal Arch chapter severed its con nection with the grand chapter of England, and from that date worked under a charter from the grand chapter of Canada, under the style of Ancient Frontenac Royal Arch chapter No. 1. In 1868 the chapter arranged to move to another room in connection with Cataragui chapter, No. 12, Ancient St. John's lodge, No. 4, and Catagaqui lodge, No. 92, in a building on King street, built by the late R. Town. The two lodges and two chapters fitted up the rooms in gorgeous style. A feeling prevailed that | plendent in a new coat of paint and varit would be more to the interest of craft masonry if an amalgamation of the two chapters was affected. A number of attempts in this line were made but failed. In 1885, however, it was determined to bring about an amalgamation. A correspondent of the Wing writes: 'My travels extend from Toronto to Wind sor and from Port Dover to Owen Sound over nearly every main and branch line. I can safely say that notwithstanding the cold, backward spring the hav crop will be the heaviest for years. The fall wheat looks remarkably well. Crops put in this spring are backward, besides there are a number of farmers not through with their seeding. The frost last month was not severe enough to do much damage, thanks to cloudy weather. It is likely that peaches are a failure, but other fruits are in fair state, as the blossoms are backward on account of the cool weather."

Scared A Burgiar Away. About 1:15 o'clock Friday morning Mrs. John Payne, Portsmouth, was awakened by a noise created on the ground floor of her residence. She at once called her husband, feeling sure burglars were operating in the lower rooms. Mr. Payne descended and was just in time to see a man jump through a bay window, which the fellow had raised to gain admittance. Mr. Payne pursued the housebreaker, who, however, had too great a start and escaped, going north across lots. Upon investigation nothing was missed, and it is supposed that the burglar had just entered the room when the faint noise he made in doing so aroused Mrs. Payne. Residents of the village are of the opinion that a constable should be on the streets all night instead of until midnight only.

the Jubilee Celebration-A Military Salute and Fireworks Suggested -

The meeting of the diamond jubilee celebration committees in the city council chamber last evening was not as largeweek ago. Mayor Skinner occupied the chair, and secretary Drennan was in his place as usual

Lieut. Col. Drennan tendered his resignation as secretary, on the ground that the battery of which he is in command goes into camp on the 15th inst. for twelve days' training, and he could not do full justice to both his battery and the preparations for the celebration. If the affair were to prove a failure, the blame might be laid upon him, on account of his being unable to give full time to the preparations. Moreover, in a local weekly The Y.M.C.A. will have a large tent at sheet, a citizen is represented as having stated that when another celebration is being prepared for, the management should be changed.

The meeting strongly disapproved of this assertion and bore testimony to the success of the efforts of the management of in the case of secretary Drennan.

The infantry corps that were ordered into camp on June 22nd have been given the privilege of coming into camp on either dune 22nd or the 23rd. Two of them have elected to come on June 23nd, but they will be so tired when they arrive that they cannot be expected to participate in a review. He thought, however, that a change should be made in the character of these demonstrations and that more variety should be

Lieut.-Col. Drennan was sorry that the 22nd of June had been chosen for the celebration. There has been a good deal of wire pulling of late, with the object of having the annual camp of training transferred from Kingston to Belleville this year. And the reason given for this agitation was that the citizens of Kingston do not treat the militiamen in camp as well as do the people of Belleville, who turn out every year and give the officers a warm reception. He had thought of inviting the officers of the corps in camp to attend a grand hop in the Hotel Frontenac on the evening of years. Many charters from the supreme grand chapter of England, and it is worthy of note that Frontenac chapter was first to take steps towards the fulfilment of this object. This and the feeling of unrest caused by the doubt of the validity of the Jarvis warrants, caused the grand chapter of Upper Canada to discontinue its regular meetings, and in 1828 its authority ceased, in a measure, to exist. On August 3rd. 1828, at a convocation of Frontenac chapter, companions Gordon, Bethune Thompson and Hagerman were appointed a committee to prepare a memorial to the supreme grand chapter of England, pray ing for a charter. This memorial was not adopted until May 4th, 1829, the delay being occasioned by promises of the resurrection of the provincial grand chapter, which promises were never carried into effect. The memorial here referred to was forwarded to England in 1830, but there is advisable to close, and after November

14th, 1830, the Frontenac chapter did not

That the Frontenac chapter had for some time previous to its closing conformed to the system approved by the supreme grand chapter of England is apparent, for in the records the three principal officers are styled respectively, Z.; H., J. The names of the other officers, as adopted in 1818, were changed, and the chapter had resolved "that the intermediate degrees were not considered necessary previous to exaltation," thereby merely returning to the working of this chapter as pursued at the close of last century. There were fifty-five brethren exalted in Frontenac chapter between the years 1817 and 1830, and twelve companions joined during that period. The greatest number of exaltations in one year took place in 1825, when twelve brethren received the royal arch degree. For nearly seventeen years had this chapter lain in abeyance, when bright days again shone on the royal craft, and St. John's lodge, which had ceased to work in auspicious circumstances. In December, 1844, the number of this lodge on the English registry was changed to No. 491. Craft masonry again flourished in this city, and many who desired to reach the summit of ancient masonry were compelled at great expense to obtain the degree in chapters at a distance, usually in the United States. Hence these brethren felt the necessity of re-opening Frontenac chanter. Accordingly, on May 3rd, 1847, the charter obtained in 1819, in possession of St. John's lodge, was revived, and the offi cers inducted by virtue of a dispensation granted on April 24th of the same year by Z. M. Phillips, the last G.H.P. of the grand chapter of Upper Canada. Only one companion who belonged the chapter in 1838 had Canada. He was elected first officer of the chapter, but died in November, 1847. The companions were desirous of carrying out the intentions of former members of 1829-30, to place themselves under proper jurisdiction. The supreme grand chapter of England was memorialized for a charter. On August 2nd, 1848, the supreme grand chapter of England granted, free of expense, a charter of constitution to companions Thomas J. Angel, Francis the Kingston foundry company's wharf, Milo, Michael Harrington, Samuel Fowler, William R. Davies, James A. Henderson, W. J. Goodeave, John Shaw and William Kearns, designating the body "The Ancient Frontenac chapter attached to St. John's lodge, No. 491," English registry. On February 20th, 1849, Frontenac chapter adopted the present by-laws.

Hewever, it was found inconvenient for the chapter to meet in a building separate from that of the lodge to which the chapter was attached. It was decided to hold convocations in the hall of St. John's lodge, in a stone building on the corner of Brock and Wellington streets, where, until November, 1853, the chapter was convened. About that time the room over St. John's lodge room was rented and fitted up. In May, 1856, several members of Frontenac chapter opened Moria royal arch in Frontenac chapter during their residence

Ludgate announced that there would be no stopping after he once got started, and Hymn after hymn rolled out swiftly, one fifty-one hymns in an hour, but he was away ahead of time when he reached his twenty-sixth hymn. Then he peeled off his coat and threw in a number of hymns not in the contract. Some of these were set to popular airs and some others went with a really stirring swing.

"Bless the Lord, I've broken the record !" he shouted, as the soldiers crowded up to congratulate him.
