The boys were continually walking up and down the car disturb-ing those who tried to have a few hours reat. Pillows were stolen, some having no less than ten while many had none. When Belleville was reached a number got out and amused themselves by running races. A good many, no doubt, have worn out atockings this morning. During the trip songs were sung, J. Hogie being the leader. Mr. Hogie favored the company with the song entitled "Some Day." ed well earned applause. The trip up was a pleasant one. Every one enjoyed station, Toronto, was reached 14th bast, came on board and received a hearty welcome. The battalion, after disembarking, were marched from the depot to their beadquarters, the old Simpson building, on the corner of Leader and Colborne etreet. Here they had breakfast, to which the boys did justice. The battalion was then dismissed for the day. taking in all the sights. When on street the members of the 14th batt, be haved in a creditable manner. They were all nearly dressed and carried themselves as soldiers should. They were admired and spoken of in high terms by everyone. As a Torontorian remarked, "They are the

The battalion marched in perfect order. Not a man was out of line. Viewing them from the side they looked like stone walls. Kingston has retson to be proud of its battalien. and especially for the manner in which it went through the proceedings at Toronto along with so many other fine regiments. The march from the battalion's barracks to the exhibition grounds was a distance of eight miles and a half. The day was very warm, and the sun poured down upon the boys with great strength, but not a complaint was heard from any of them. They endured the march like heroes. A halt to give the men a drink should have been made. Carts with water were in the procession, but no halt was made until the grounds were reached. Here an opportunity was given to liquor up. battalion, after marching into hibition grounds, had their rifles taken from them and taken to their rooms in a cart. Before leaving the grounds the batcommittee to a dinner. The march up made the boys rather hungry and justice was amply done to what was laid before them. After dinner the battalion was dismissed Many of the volunteers took the oppor-tunity, being so near "C" infantry school, of visiting it. They were heartily welcomed and treated in fine style. Too much could not be done by "C" school for the Kingston battalion. The afternoon was spent visiting places in the city. Many took a trip to Hanlan's Island and viewed the ex-shampion. Wherever the boys went they were treated in right royal style. At their barracks a number of old Kingstonisns could be found at any time talking and welcoming the city corps. 'From a sanitary standpoint the battation should not have been allowed to remain in the building. Many of the boys, rather than sleep in the place, engaged rooms at the different hotels. The committee should have attended to the regiment in a little better style. It was impossible for the boys to look as clean as they would liked to have done. Before parading an hour's brushing had to be gone through with. On the whole, however, the boys enjoyed themselves and were pleased with their trip. They wished that another day in Pittsburg. On Monday Dr. Spankie, authorized the minister of education, held an investige tion into the difficulty relating to S.S. No. 12, Pittaburg. The question in dispute is the interpretation of regulation 203 of the department, which gives parents and guardians the pewer to have their pupils excises by requesting the teacher to allow the same. The present difficulty arose from the Napaneo was the centre of a teacher's method of closing the school for the day. He allowed the pupils who de sired, or whose parents or guardians desired, to retire from the religious exercises, but required them to remain on the school prenises, either in the porch of the school house or outside as they wished, and to re-turn to the school room after the religious exercises for dismissal with the rest of the pupils. Certain pupils disobeyed this order repeatedly and were suspended by the teacher for so doing. Hence the present difficulty. Exception was taken to this course of the teacher and the claims advanced by the complainant that in being allowed to retire from these exercises, which are the closing exercises of the day, pupils are dismissed for the day. In support of this claim it was held that it was cruel, un | was headed by Major Carstaller

It was of with, and that it was never the intention of the law to so require of them. The teacher claimed he had the right to act as he did and that it was in the interest of the whole school that he did so. He had a letter from the department stating that he had electric scap, carriages a this right. It was not written by the minis. The Gananoque carriage ter, but by his chief clerk and during the talion and Picton bands f minister's absence. The teacher further contended that any other mode of dismissal "Doo," the racing dog, award by would interfere with his proper school Ketchum, Brighton, was much exercises, and that it was unfair to allow The barber shop raised the hu oertain pupils to go home earlier than many people. McGinty had a mothers. Rev. Father Quinn appeared as chair and was daubing him with and made several charges against the teacher relating to his treatment of Catholic pupils, and Mr. Staples, teacher, said his only object was the good of the whole school, and that he believed such would be secured only by treating all pupils alike. Other witnesses examined were Messrs. Robert Anglin, Walter Anglin and John Driscoll, trustees; P. Dean and P. Shortell, parents; Mary Milne and P. W. Dean, pupils; Mr. Spence and other rate-
