THE VERY LATEST FASHIONS FOR SUMMER WEAR.

Charming Costumes, Dainty Dresses and Graceful Gowns—Jaunty Jackets and Marvellous Mantles—Pretty Parasols and Beautiful Bonnets—Summer Styles In London, Paris and New York.

To keep cool is a study, and with grass linen underwear, corsets which are a strap of linen with puffings of lawn and the lightest of lawn and Shanghai silk above, a woman finds the nineties endurable in the shade.

All the new ideas in dress are airy as possible. The figured India and French silks are made with plain gathered skirts, trimmed with two broad insertions of black lace above the wide hem. Or the new French fashion is adopted of six or eight three-inch ribbons in contrast to the dress carried down the front and sides, a quarter of a yard apart, and knotted in a square bow with four short loops and two long ones, known as the windmill bow, because it recalls the rosette effect of flyers and sails. Ribbon gowns are very airy, of wide black lace insertion, with ovals through which narrow ribbon is threaded, and these ovals are set together by wider ribbon of the same or contrasting color, the whole mounted on a foundation of silk.

Very pretty jackets and lace skirts are made of this insertion striped with fine ribbon, and are inexpensive; the lace five inches wide, of firm quality and selling at 25 cents a yard, with eyelets for five and seven lines of the narrowest ribbon.

The handles of parasols are shorter, and the parasols themselves increase in size. The effort to introduce the tartan covers has so far proved unsuccessful and it is doubtful if they will be much used except with special dresses. Very pretty full dress sunshades are trimmed down the ribs with frilled chiffon and decorated with huge bows of ribbon at the top. Mousseline de soie sunshades are edged with lace and vandyked toward the top. Crepe de chine parasols, with a cascade of transparent material or lace down every seam, look more like huge flowers than anything else, and are extremely dainty and dressy. But the greatest novelty is the "Pedestrienne" sunshade, which will be eagerly appropriated by ladies. Everyone knows the woman's trick of transforming her down-turned sunshade into a basket for the reception of flowers, weed, and grasses on her country rambles, though she suffer much discomfort meanwhile from the rays of the sun upon her unprotected face. Some clever genius has conceived the original idea of producing a sort of double headed sunshade, which, contrary to the axiom, can do two things at the same time very successfully. The upper part re enables the ordinary sunshade, but in the handle is inserted a miniature parasol in a reverse position which, opening outward, forms a convenient receptacle for the freshly gathered flowers. To a lady gathering nosegays in her own well-ordered garden on a sunny morning the invention would be acceptable, while to the pedestrienne it is indeed a delight and joy.

All tones of yellow are considered most chic and correct in costumes for both simple and elaborate occasions, and black and white is a favorite combination for young people. One of the most distinguished dresses lately evolved, which would grace an empress and transform an ordinary woman into a queen, is a pale primrose satin brocade, with trails of full-blown apple blossoms, half in soft gray shadow and half in strong relief. Its decoration consists of flounces of Chantilly lace, and about the hem is one of the new ruchings that add so much to the dressy and becoming effect of the severe skirts.

PARIS BONNET AND SCARF.

Gaiters of finest black cloth, or of colors to match the gown, lined in most cases with satin, are to be much worn this season for wearing over walking shoes. They are cooler and easier than boots and answer the same purpose for town wear especially. The best ones are most carefully made and fitted and button up like a boot.

Among novelties in millinery are the flower toques, which promise to be popular this season for youthful heads, one in corn-flowers and yellow crocus on a rolled band of blue velvet, and another cowslips, with two large black lace butterflies, being especially pretty. A fancy black crinoline hat, much bent up and almost hidden by a mass of shaded corn-flowers, is finished off at the back with a band of the field blossoms resting on the hair.

Among bonnets is one composed of bands of rolled red velvet, with large half beads of cut jet placed in between, two red silk rosettes and a large butterfly of black lace. Another of cream Tuscan, edged with tinted lilac, had the open space above laced across with gold ribbon, which emerged at the back and formed strings.

Velvet ribbon is beginning to be worn about the neck again, and the advent of collarettes of velvet will be hailed with delight by thin women. The collaret is made of piece velvet shaped to fit the neck, and is fringed with pearls and beaded with a single row of diamonds. Jet coronets, long in disfavor, are now seen gleaming in fluffy hair, and anything fanciful in the way of hair ornaments that is not too high is allowable, not only in the coiffures, but on a part of the bonnet or dress hat.

A charming racing costume is of pale coral and white striped canvas, bordered with silk galon checked in the same colors. The drapery is opened on one side over a skirt of coral faille of a peculiar shade holding a tint of yellow, and the bodice is somewhat elaborate, being composed of coral faille, with folded vest and sleeves of the canvas, just touched here and there with gold and coral embroidery.

A piquant jaunty dress of the same character is of white serge, with fine lines of dark red and woven borders about eight inches deep of red spotted with white moons. The gown is made with a loose-fronted polonaise draped over a plain skirt, and has a half handkerchief fichu of the spotted material falling from the throat to the waist.

In gloves the craze is still for the seamless kids with their mysterious fastenings. Mrs. Langtry has ordered a dozen pairs of them, and other fastidious women find them faultless in fit, and especially well suited to plump hands. New driving gloves are of white cheverette suede with linings in the thumb and fingers of tan kid, and are fastened with four buttons. They have embroidery of thick silk in white, cream, or lavender up the back. Very quaint gauntlet gloves, to be used to be worn with lace sleeve ruffles, have three little straps and buckles placed at intervals, through which the ruffles are revealed with pretty effect.

The latest watch, particularly if the gloves are intended as a souvenir, is to have the fair wearer's name embroidered in silk at the top, in exact facsimile of her chirography, with a dash beneath.

Some gloves recently designed to be worn with a black and silver dress were of black and embroidered very daintily up the back of the arm in silver; but this decoration is as yet hardly well established and rarely seen.

LONDON'S LATEST HAT.

Mantles are fantastic and elaborate, and come in an endless variety of styles. This is a jet season, and handsome jet trimmings brighten up almost every handsome wrap. Lace is used in great profusion, and velvet is once more restored to favor. Very beautiful guipure work, edged with fringe quite a quarter of a yard deep, exactly shaped to the shoulders, and half the front and back, of the bodice is connected with a bit of silk down the centre of the back to form one of the prettiest mantles seen. The guipure is usually accompanied with beads, though sometimes it is worked like chain armor in the silk with a fringe of beads. Pretty summer models have bodices of jetted velvet with lace sleeves and skirts, or sleeves of long jet fringes with the lace skirts, which are very effective over a colored dress.

APPEALED FROM MAN'S CRUELTY.

A Husband, Wife and Child Find Rest in the River.

Franz Wendlandt reached America a year ago with his intellectual bride happy, hopeful and strong. He was a poet, an author and a musician, but for none of his specialties could he find a market. A twelvemonth went by and the young couple, then residents of Hoboken, N. J., and the parents of a beautiful little girl, found themselves face to face with the direst poverty.

They had no resources, were in arrears for rent, and were to lose their furniture on the morrow because of a chattel mortgage. No ray of hope dawned on their distracted minds, and when the darkness of night settled down over the city they went hand in hand to the river, she carrying her babe, and flung themselves in. The corpses have been recovered and given decent burial.

Rules for a Clear Skin.

You want to keep your skin nice all summer! Well, then, here are some rules for you;

Don't bathe in hard water; soften it with a few drops of ammonia, or a little borax.

Don't bathe your face while it is very warm, and never use very cold water for it.

Don't wash your face when you are traveling unless it is with a little alcohol and water, or a little vaseline.

Don't attempt to remove dust with cold water; give your face a hot bathe, using plenty of good soap, then give it a thorough rinsing with water that has had the chill taken off it.

Don't rub your face with a coarse towel just remember that it is not made of cast-iron, and treat it as you would the finest porcelain—gently and delicately.

Don't use a sponge or linen rag for your face; use instead a flannel one.

Don't believe you can get rid of wrinkles by filling in the crevices with powder. Instead give your face a Russian bath every night; that is, bathe it with water so hot that you wonder how you can stand it, and then, a moment later, with cold water that will make it glow with warmth; dry it with a soft towel and go to bed, and you ought to sleep like a baby while your skin is growing firmer and coming from out of the wrinkles, and you are resting.

Care of the Nails.

The nails should be cut carefully once a week before washing, for if soft one is apt to cut them too short. When washing rub diligently every knuckle and every nail with the rag. The hand cannot be rubbed too long. With the nail of one finger push down the flesh around another and clean the nails with one another while still in the hot suds. Then rinse and put on glycerine, rubbing very long; then rinse this off and put on almond flour, which will give softness and gloss to the skin. When this is rinsed off and the hands dried carefully the result is a success.

Never use either scissors or anything sharp under the nail, says the Pittsburg Dispatch. If a cleaner is necessary, fold a piece of the edge of a newspaper into a point, and use that. Then polish the nails with the chamois rubber, and finally rub the nails upon your cheek and all the oil necessary will be obtained.

Should any stain like shoe polish or ink get under the nail put on some cold cream, and after rubbing carefully rinse off with hot water. When fruit packing and preserving time comes rub a little butter on the finger tips and under the nails; then rinse off with hot water before using soap, as the soap is apt to set the stain.

Serving a Pineapple Ice.

The delicate water ice made from a rich flavored pineapple should be served in round molds on a low crystal platter, decorated with a wreath of whipped cream, flavored with pineapple juice and candied pieces of the fruit, and with the green tuft of the leaves set in the centre of the cream. This is the tempting fashion in which The Hotel Guide would have it.

Great Value in Clothing Made to Order.

Z. Prevost has decided to sell for the balance of the season all his suitings and trouserings, consisting of Scotch and English tweeds, fancy silk mixtures, silk stripes and corkscrew twills, at prices that defy competition. His $10.50 all wool navy blue English serge, made to order, takes the lead every year.

The Old Story.

The enormous and constantly increasing sales of the "Athlete" and "Derby" cigarettes add another to the many proofs that a superior article is the sure road to success.

AMUSING AND INSTRUCTIVE ENTERTAINMENT FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.

Kitty Has a Real Live Visitor, and Entertains Her Aunt Jane Instead of Dolls at Afternoon Tea—But It Was of the "Cambric" Variety.

Kitty had her own little table set for tea with her dolls, and never thought of such a thing as having a real live visitor. But she went up stairs to find one of her doll children, and when she came back there was Aunt Jane sitting by the fire warming her feet. It was a long walk from her house and the day was cold.

"Good afternoon, Aunt Jane," said Kitty. "You are just in time. Come and take tea with me."

"Dear me, I can't!" said Aunt Jane. "I am very cold. I must sit by the fire."

KITTY'S AFTERNOON TEA.

"Oh, Aunt Jane," said Kitty, "of course I shall bring it to you. Mother's away, and I am so glad to have a real visitor!"

"Oh, I'm sorry your mother's out," said Aunt Jane. "Well, there, I think it would rest me to have some tea."

Kitty pours carefully. It seems to be hot. I see the steam.

But this tea was made for Kitty and the dolls. It is not such tea as Aunt Jane drinks. It is what people call "cambric tea," made of milk and hot water with a great deal of sugar in it. I am afraid Aunt Jane will feel disappointed, and think it will not "rest" her much.

The foregoing story was first told for the benefit of Little Men and Women by Pamela M. Cole.

A Day at Coney Island.

Off to Coney Island!
Off to spend a day
On the breezy sea shore,
With wind and waves to play!
Four pairs of bright eyes;
Four pairs of hands—
Oh, what fun we're going to have
Digging in the sands!
We'll build a house for dolly,
We'll send our ship to sea,
And none at Coney Island
Will have such good times as we.
We never shall grow tired, I know,
Of such a jolly place,
Where all sorts of happy times
Await each happy face.

Back from Coney Island,
As tired as tired can be,
Come four as sleepy children
As ever you did see.
The fish laugh in the water,
And the gulls cry overhead,
"See the sleepy children
Who ought to be in bed!"
We've had a very happy day
With the wind and waves and sand,
With the playthings that the ocean
Gently lays upon the land;
But of all the pleasant places
The dearest and the best
Is the home to which we're going,
Full of peace and quiet and rest.

—Harper's Young People.

Game of the White Cat.

This is a lively game, and is a new version of the old game of puss-in-the-corner. A good sized room being a little cleared of the furniture, the players take possession of the corners, while the white cat stands in the center. The players are then bound to change corners with their neighbors as frequently as possible, the white cat striving to gain one of the corners in the intervals. In any case the cat retains the office, but when one of the other players is caught out of her or his corner that player is obliged to retire from the game. That corner is then considered "stopped," and must no longer be used. If any one unluckily enters a stopped corner that player must also retire. The game is continued until all the players have thus been caught and placed in banishment. Two or more players may occupy each corner at the commencement of the game.

Discipline in a Royal Nursery.

One day, so the story goes, the emperor of Germany, busied in his own room, heard a violent disturbance in the nursery, and speedily made his way to the scene of tumult. When he entered the crown prince and Prince Eitel drew themselves up and saluted their father in the military fashion, as was their wont.

"What is all this noise about?" asked the emperor.

"A slight dispute, sire," said his eldest son, "and I was obliged to let my brother know who is crown prince in this establishment."

"Good," said his majesty; "I see what you mean, and now I think it will be as well if I let you know in the same way who is emperor in this particular family!" And he forthwith administered a punishment which impressed itself on the mind and also on the body of the crown prince.
