Successful Business Women.

"Mrs. Harriet Hubbard Ayer," says a New York weekly, "has fairly won the position she now enjoys as a successful business woman, and her present sumptuous quarters, which include the entire four story mansion, 305 Fifth Avenue, and a factory and laboratory on West 31st St., are thoroughly worthy of the industry, intelligence and skill of a woman who has battled successfully and faithfully in the building up of a business which is now known all over the world. Her life is familiar to everybody and her success is the natural result of a deserving ambition. She has made much money and thousands of the deserving poor of New York and elsewhere can testify to her generous and ostentatious charity. One characteristic makes her worthy of the appreciation of all. She is always sincere, and her business history is one of perfect fairness. The preparations which she has placed on the market have been analyzed by eminent chemists and are not only pure, but are positively beneficial. It has been long admitted by medical science that the skin can be beautified by treatment; the trouble has always been, what shall be used? The skin should be pure and clear. If it is otherwise the cause is in the unhealthy condition of it. Madam Recamier astonished Europe by maintaining her beauty until extreme age; everyone wondered how it was accomplished. Mrs. Harriet Hubbard Ayer, who alone possesses the secret of the formulas used by the beautiful Recamier, having purchased them years ago from a descendant of that lady, personally directs their preparation, daily, in her own laboratory. The high testimony of men and women in America and Europe, whose reputations are beyond question could not have been secured for any use that was not in harmony with honesty and integrity. Such testimony of appreciation and thanks has been extended to Mrs. Ayer voluntarily. Look at the list of leaders of art, literature, law and commerce, who frankly acknowledge that the RECAMIER PREPARATIONS are, beyond question, the best of their kind ever manufactured. The complete success and prosperity of the business is the strongest argument in favor of the Recamier Preparations. Such things cannot last long unless they are what they are advertised to be, and the reward of success is given only to the work of merit."

The articles referred to in the above extract are known as RECAMIER CREAM, for tan, sunburn, pimples, etc. Price $1.50.

RECAMIER BALM, a beautifier pure and simple. Price $1.50.

WHAT SHALL WE WEAR?

LATEST NOVELTIES IN DRESS DESCRIBED AND ILLUSTRATED.

Recent Importations in Millinery—Hats and Bonnets Seen in the New York Shop Windows and at the Autumn Openings.

Hats are all quips and cranks again for the winter season. One of a very whimsical shape in black felt, seen at a recent opening, had a small and perfectly round crown. One side was ornamented with a wreath of tiny black tips, and the back was fastened up with a cluster of the same. The hat was enlivened by a large bow of bright blue velvet. Another hat—more outre, if anything, in shape—had a portion of the brim on the left side cut off. The other side came out in a wide poke in front. This hat was profusely trimmed with mauve feathers. On one hat were counted no less than nine birds. Many of the French hats are trimmed with flowers. The hats that are large and flat are known as plate shapes.

Turquois blue plays an all important part in millinery. One very small bonnet seen was composed of turquois and steel. Velvet will be a very popular material during the forthcoming winter. Tomato and capsicum colors, also a deep yellow, promise to be largely worn. A bonnet that excelled all other queer shapes seen was heart shaped. It was made of blue velvet, and trimmed with black rosettes and birds.

In the accompanying cut are shown two imported bonnets. The first figure illustrates a bonnet of heliotrope velvet with a brim of applique black lace. Around the small and peculiar crown is a jet coronet, and jet drops edge the brim. The strings are of velvet. The remaining figure shows a bonnet in sapphire blue velvet, with black lace strings; the garniture is composed of lace, jet ornaments, and feather aigrette and twisted folds of velvet.

New Woolen Fabrics.

The new patterns and new fabrics for the coming season do not as yet point to any novel departure. Checks and stripes will both be worn, the checks large and the stripes irregular. One of the novelties is the checks and stripes with an astrakhan effect introduced, black and fleecy. A new stuff called drap St. Petersburg has a check formed with square, coarse stripes. The horizontal and perpendicular stripes are frequently of a totally different color, and in contrast to the ground. One of the most delightfully soft stuffs of the year is a pure, self colored vicuna, made in over a dozen shades. Serge is always in fashion, and nearly every one has one serge dress at least in her wardrobe; the novelty is the Sergine Raye, or striped serge, with white and brown stripes on the blue ground, the colorings varying according to taste. A new fabric is "polle." It is checked and striped, and the patterns differ greatly. Some of the tailor tweeds are close and fine as delaine, only thicker, and others as rough and coarse as Bath blanketing.

An Item for the Masculine Sex.

It has been decided by the Association of Master Tailors of Paris and Lyons that the masculine sex is to lay aside its dark garments, and to appear henceforth clothed in lively colors. Coats are to be made in bright shades, and there are to be gorgeous waistcoats, lace jabots and knee breeches and stockings to match. A ball will be given in Paris and Lyons during the course of the winter to inaugurate this revival of elegant clothes for men. Paris decrees the fashions for women, but from London comes the word that decides those for men, and London has not yet spoken in favor of many colored coats and knee breeches.

Evening and Dinner Dress.

For evening wear many of the best English gowns are made with polonaises, some with a few delicate gathers concentrated at the back just below the waist line. Lace is profusely used on some as bodice trimming. In the height of fashion are black gowns trimmed with jet and turquois and worn with turquois ornaments. One recently made was of black satin, with the front entirely covered with embroidery of jet. The bodice was en suite, on one shoulder being a rosette of blue velvet and on the other jet fern leaves which stood upright.

A FRENCH DINNER GOWN.

The princesse robe forms the model of a charming French dinner toilet shown in our cut. This Paris gown has a long, serpent like train in rose colored silk, and opens on the left side to show off a panel in apple green gauze arranged in accordion plaitings. A beaded edging follows the outline of the opening, under which the gown is invisibly fastened. It is also carried along the green gauze bertha, caught up in the center with a jeweled clasp, while strings of pearls encircle the puffed epaulet on the right side, the neck and the Diana coiffure. A green velvet plaiting projects from under the train, and clusters of roses are fastened on the left shoulder.

Descendants of Pontius Pilate.

It may be known to only a few people that direct descendants of Pontius Pilate, the Roman Governor, are living in this country. The ancient archives of Vienna, Austria, and Pesth, Hungary, show that a grandson of Pontius Pilate, Caius Flavius Pilate, was made Proctor of the Roman Province of Dacia, on the Lower Danube. Later on we find a descendant of his Governor Panonia, the present Kingdom of Hungary, and married with one of the Byzantine Greek Princesses. Still later the family moved into Austria. Some forty years ago two members of the family moved to this country and gained reputations as florists and land caps gardeners. One of the brothers laid out the Central Park of New York, and soon after died. The other is carrying on, with his son, the florist business in Sing Sing, N. Y.

DETECTING COUNTERFEIT MONEY.

Methods of Bank Tellers—It is Easier Now Than It Used To Be.

To the casual observer it is always a wonder that cashiers, bank tellers, and others who handle large amounts of paper money are able at a glance to throw out a bad note. Speaking on this topic an old bank teller said: "It must be remembered that in the first place the men who handle money as a business are compelled to have a very thorough familiarity with the appearance of every genuine note. Counterfeits do not appear until after the genuine has been some time in use, and every part of it is well known. It is not so wonderful, then, that after his daily familiarity with the appearance of a note the first deviation from it should attract attention. Exactly what it is that does expose the counterfeit the best experts find it difficult to tell. They say they know it instinctively. They judge not only by the looks of a note, but by the feel of it.

"It is obvious that a counterfeit note must be widely circulated to make it profitable. No sooner does a counterfeit appear than its description is widely published. Those who are likely to suffer by taking counterfeit notes make it their business to be on the lookout for new counterfeits, which are soon distinguishable by some easily discovered mark. A teller knows just what denomination of notes has been counterfeited, and just where to look for the tell-tale marks. He notices the counterfeit as easily as a reader notes a misspelled word. It is no particular effort. It is habit, and becomes a second nature.

"One and the main reason why counterfeits are easily detected is because in some feature they are almost uniformly of inferior quality. This is, indeed, the main protection of the public. Genuine notes are engraved and printed almost regardless of cost, and the very best materials are used in the engraving and printing. It is done in large establishments with costly materials and the best workmen. It is practically impossible for counterfeiters to do work as well. They must work in secret and at a disadvantage, and of necessity cannot have the experience to produce such perfect work. If they get the engraving done nicely they fail in the printing or, if they get the engraving and and printing done well, they fail in securing proper paper. Of late years there has been a good deal of care taken to get paper manufactured expressly for the notes issued by the Government. The national bank notes are examined by the Government, so that the sources of supply for exactly that kind of paper are controlled.

"Before the war it was much more difficult than it is now to detect bad money. There were wildcat banks whose notes were of no value of the same name as good banks, and the wildcat notes were of the same form as the good notes. Then there were many altered notes from lower to higher denominations. The use of greenbacks, or any backs at all, was rare, so that the counterfeiter had but one side of a note to counterfeit. Of late years the paper is covered front and back with the figures of the denomination so that alteration from a lower to a higher denomination is rare. Before the war by actual computation four-fifths of the bank note issues were counterfeited. There were in circulation in 1860 actually 3,639 different kinds of bad money, and it was estimated that about $60,000,000 of it was afloat.

"When the necessities of the war led to the Government issue of paper money all these old banks went out of existence, and the old counterfeits went out with them. It was a great boom to the business community to have the old stuff wiped out and the new, clean currency put into circulation that was current all over the Union. It was some years before successful counterfeits appeared. The first issue of the national bank notes of the denomination of $5 was practically not counterfeited for fifteen years. Even taking all the denominations of national bank money and all the varieties of money issued by the Government, the number of these varieties is trifling compared with the immense number of banks before the war, whose notes were all different.

"It is true we have more Banks now but it must be remembered that the notes of each denomination issued by all the national banks, or for them, are all alike, except the titles. The changes have been few and many years apart. When a teller learned the appearance of the first notes of the denomination of $1 issued to the national banks it was some years before he saw a counterfeit, and, of course, he detected the counterfeit almost by instinct.

"There is little protection for the poor and the ignorant from counterfeit money. They do not rely so much upon their own skill as upon keeping track of the source from which they receive money. They know from whom they received a bank note, and if it turns out bad they take it back and get it redeemed. In some degree this protection exists among financial institutions which keep trace of the sources of their receipts.

"When it is considered how many millions of dollars of the same sort are issued by the Government, it is wonderful that the genuine plates are not oftener used for the purpose of printing unauthorized issues. Of course, it is pretended that the safeguards of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing are so great that no such wrong could be done. But there is a well authenticated case where the printer actually did print from the genuine plates without discovery while being watched by a bank officer. Some years ago there was a famous suit in which the Government financial agents in New York claimed to have redeemed a certain issue which proved to be unauthorized, and the experts were very much in conflict as to whether the issue was actually counterfeited or printed from Government plates. It was finally decided by a jury that the issue was counterfeit, although some reputable experts swore that it was printed from the Government plates.

"When you look at it a moment, it is not nearly so wonderful that a teller should detect a bad note as that a proof reader should detect bad spelling. It is only another instance of the trained eye. The expert mechanic sees things at a glance that an ordinary observer would not notice. This is particularly true of all kinds of artistic work. The artist sees the defect and can hardly describe it in words, although he may be able to correct it. Some years ago there used to be men travelling about the country teaching the art of detecting counterfeit money. But anybody who knew how to put them to the test could often show that their boasted skill was of little value compared with that of the shrewd bank teller in the habit of handling large amounts of money, who could not tell why he threw out the bad note, but yet could throw it out with almost unfailing accuracy."—New York Sun.

Jollifello—Y-e-s. Fact is, I never see the knot till I take out my handkerchief to wipe my mouth.—New York Weekly.

Solid Facts For Smokers.

Reasons why S. Davis & Sons maintain the quality of their brands: It has taken the best part of a lifetime to establish them. They have spent thousands upon thousands of dollars to introduce them. Having obtained the confidence of the public they wish to merit a continuance of same. A deterioration of quality in their brands would not alone destroy the structure upon which they have spent their time, money and labor, but would result in a loss of that confidence the public have favored them with that money again spent in advertising to introduce new brands could not purchase. Therefore; is it to be supposed that any sane business man would be so foolish as to destroy in a short time what it has taken so long to establish. Their brands, "Cable," "Mungo," "El Padre" and "Madre e Hijo," are on doubtedly the best value, the safest and most reliable smoke, and can be sure to the consumer than cigars of a much inferior quality. Why smoke other brands or permit dealers (for the sake of additional gain) to sell you those that you are in most cases unfamiliar with.

WAYS OF WOMEN FAIR.

ANECDOTES AND ODD BITS OF NEWS ILLUSTRATING THE

Fads, Foibles and Peculiar Notions of the Fair Sex—Something About Pins—Music, Patti at the Russian Court—Notes on the Very Latest Fashions.

In the last 10 years 12,000 women have been divorced through the Chicago courts.

Miss Patti is to be a guest at court in Russia when she gives her concerts at the imperial palaces at St. Petersburg this winter.

The Rev. Phebe Hanford, author of "The Heart of Scomet," and a dozen other charming books, is one of the women of America who has never allowed her books, her sermons or her missions to subordinate the holiest duties of the hearthstone.

There is a new portrait of Lady Randolph Churchill out. It is naturally a charming picture of a charming lady, but the pose and the expression are devotional. A critic says, however, "No, her ladyship is entreating his lordship not to resign his seat in the cabinet."

Miss Helen Smythe, of Chicago, a taffy-haired, brown-eyed girl, goes bicycling all over the West Side on her machine. A couple of years ago an ominous M. D. tried to prepare the picturesque Helen for the golden stairs. She wouldn't be prepared, but bought a three-wheeler, had a pilgrim dress made, mounted the cycle, and has been on wheels three hours daily ever since. It is needless to say that she rolls past the house of the would-be maker of angel choirs as often as convenient. Miss Smythe is one of the best teachers in the Chicago public school service.

Miss Ellen Terry's gowns for "Ravenswood" are triumphs of art in so far as the details of the period are concerned. She wears four different costumes in the play. One is a somewhat quaintly fashioned riding habit of a pinkish shade of red, and with this she will don a three-cornered hat. Another is a corsage and draperies of pink brocade, lined with gray over a petticoat of pale green and white. A third is a simple little dress of pale blue material, made as plain as a stage gown ever is, and in all the greater contrast to the last gown, which is of white brocade and satin.

Miss Katie Drexel, discarded for the black robe and the name Sister Katharine, is now engaged in teaching some of the 300 little ones who call St. Paul's Roman catholic orphan asylum, Detroit, "their home." Her school is composed of the primary pupils of the vast establishment, and tenderly and lovingly she governs them and teaches them the rudiments of an education. Other rooms and departments are under control of other sisters.

NOTES ON FASHIONS.

Some of the new tea-gowns are ornamented with belts of polished ivory.

Gray is to be well worn this winter in combination with soft yellow and gold braid.

A ruffle around the bottom of the skirt is the distinguishing feature of all the new gowns.

Large-patterned brocades promise to be extensively used in combination with silk this coming season.

Queen chain-pendants, representing braces of partridges in enamel and gold, are claimants for recognition.

A popular style in lace-pins is a small golden dagger, a cut intaglio, square in form resting on the blade.

An oxidized silver hair-pin is topped by a small circle through which passes a crescent set with garnets and turquoises.

Jewels, both real and imitation, will find favor this year, and artificial flowers will not be as much used as formerly.

One of the latest foibles of fashion is a squirming snake tapering down to a point, which is thrust into the wearer's scarf.

The coat of arms which is sometimes embroidered on the skirt of a dress in heraldic colors must be the legitimate property of the wearer.

A English dressmaker who is trying to make a "hit," has made a bodice for a customer which is high on one side and low on the other.

Satin and gros-grain effects are both shown among the new silks, There are many heavy corded silks, soft as the begalines but woven wholly of silk.

Hats are worn at any angle now. They may be tilted over the forehead or perched right on the back of the head—anyway to suit the wearer.

Lover's quarrels may be healed by the presentation of a brooch showing a tiny gold hatchet almost completely buried in a square bed of enameled roses.

Many of the cloth jackets are of such rich quality and so handsomely decorated that they will be entirely appropriate for dress occasions and for carriage uses.

Something About Pins.

"Where do all the pins go to?" remarked a dry goods man yesterday. "Well, that is a hard question to answer. When one thinks of the enormous production of pins throughout the world, millions and millions made daily, it seems almost incredible that they should disappear in such a mysterious fashion. Do they get lost? Are they used up? Do they wear out, or don't they disappear at all, only in our imagination?

"Statistics show," went on the gentleman, warming to his decidedly abstruse subject, "statistics show that there are manufactured in this country 150,000,000,000 pins annually; that is to say, 3,000 pins for every man, woman and child in the nation, or an average of about nine pins daily for each inhabitant, and yet I fully believe that if I should happen to need a pin, and should accost the first nine men I met on the street corner, not one of the nine men would have a single pin; whereas, to keep up the average, the first woman I accosted should have no less than eighty-one pins ready for immediate use. This is about the present condition of affairs, too. Women are such adepts in the use of pins that I have seen some of them who could actually pin a button to a door knob. But that has nothing to do with the main question. However, I think if you want a scientific answer you had better not ask a man. If you do he will be obliged to reply, much as I do now, with the counter query equally important and equally meritorious: What became of last year's snowflakes, or with the money I gave my wife last week?"

Had Not Entirely Forgotten.

Sunday school superintendent—"The lesson, children, inculcates the duty of reverencing the aged. Do you remember what once happened to a lot of bad boys who reviled an aged prophet?"

Small Boy (on front seat)—"They was eat up by the bears."

"Right. You must tell me also, Tommy, what those boys had said to him."

"I—I most forget."

"Think a li tle. Didn't they say something about his head, or the way his head was protected?"

(Enthusiastically) "Yes'r. They said, '
