He was standing up to the stove with his tom, contemplating the attractively set with fried eggs was the central feature and Mr. Cobleigh is very fond of ham and eggs. The family cat was lying under the table purring softy to herself. It was a strongly marked domestic scene, he surveyed it. Mrs. Cobleigh was taking up the potatoes. She had the last one pierced with the fork, and was about to deposit it with the rest, when she espied the upturned palm of her husband's What possessed her she cannot tell, but she dropped the steaming vegetable straight into his unconscious hand. He didn't ask her what she was doing he didn't even look around; he simp emitted an awful scream, and sprang madly into the air. On the descent he struck the table with his knees with such force as to completely overturn it, and with the contents he went to the floor with an awful crash. Five dollars worth, of crockery was smashed, and a carpet and a pair of pants were ruined by the ham gravy and the butter. It is probable Mr. Cobleigh would have fainted dead away from . the effect of the the shock, had not the cat, across whose erected back he fe!l, as she was darting away from the awful calamity, turned around and fastened her claws and teeth into his thigh with deadly verocity. That revived him. The house is now shut up. Mrs. Cobleigh is visiting her mother in Brookfield, and Mr. Cobleigh has taken a jaunt to Boston on business.
