Yesterday we mentioned with to Admiral Wellesley and the officers of that the Chief Justiceship had been of the British fleet. The company comprised fered to Mr. Thomas Moss, Q.C., the from other quarters comes the statement that Chief Justice Richards has definitely agreed to take that distinguished post, Chief Justice Dorion having declined . If the latter part of this rumour be true, it is scarcely complimentary to Chier Justice Richards, for by talents, experience and seniority he was fairly entitled to the first offer. Much less crediele is the report that Chief Justice Richards' seat in the Queen's Bench is to be taken by Mr. M. se, an Equity lawyer, who court. However qualified Mr. Moss might have been for the Supreme Bench, a new court with all its history before it, he could hardly, with all his great professional distinction, he asked to preside over a common law court, with whose practise he could be but distantly familiar. Putting an equity man on the common law bench, and vice versa, might be thought to tend to the desired fusion of law and equity, but it would be perhaps better to begin the reform at the bottom instead of at the top.
