PIANOFORTE TUNING

FRIDAY EVEN'G, OCT. 15, 1875 THE AUTUMN RAIN. Down falls the autumn rain Harp strings against the frame Of Ebon night-Flow, flow, flow, flow,

The sounds awake and fiv A wake and multiply-Now fast, now slow. Wet shadows stalk the earth, Winds roar in riotous mirth-Rush, rush, rush, rush, The poplar bends and sways, The rain weeps and it prays;

In the steady flight

One hour winds hush. The oak moans and harsh creaks. The red scarred maple speaks-Blow, blow, blov, blow The vine against the wall-Clings close, boughs break and fall The blossoms go.

Leaves droop, and told on fold Like little waves are rolled. Fall, fall, fall, fall. Grass bends like dagger blades, Broke rushes in the glades

Together matted crawl.

Swallow in chimney steep Blown from his sooty sleep-Drip, drip, drip, drip. Cat at the hearth stone lies, Bird 'tween him and the skies, His cup at cruel lip.

The window curtain slowly stirs, Weather-cock without sharp whirrs, Rain is falling faster. Around the house, up rugged street, Demons of the night storm sweep Earth hath found its master.

Flow, flow, flow, flow, A thousand pools are brimming; The autumn harp is hymning Melodious strains and slow, dies away at break of day; The world is wet and cold and pale, And tells a dreary winter s tale.
