A Washington despatch sums up the results of the contest with the whiskey charges in parliamentary fashion, the dering as follows: The amount already assessed on distilleries for unpaid taxes most of which has been collected by guilt; if a committee is asked for and distraint, the rest being secured by distillery bonds, is $745,801. The value property now under proceedings for for feiture, and against which the evidence is conclusive, is $145,365. This is in addition to the fines and suits on gaugers' attempt during the past two sessions, bonds and against rectifiers to recover double the amount of taxes.
