A DISQUIETING IDEA.

The breach between the aristocrats and the radicals, socialists, and nationalists, in British political life, not likely to disappear under the conservative party's present leadership. Canada knows what government by of yurk and honest returns by ALLEA the family compact means, and it can understand the sensation which Lord Hugh Cecil occasioned when, i an ill-advised moment, he said that parliament had lost its reputation for authority and repute and that the country would endorse its sitting aside in favour of the government. NOT A NEW THING.

Dr. Hodgins, for many years the active assistant minister of education, the man who was specially trained for his position and who was associated with Dr. Ryerson in his early educational triumphs, has written a very interesting article to the Acta Victoriana. it he describes what was accomplished in 1871-72 towards technical education, and it makes clear a part that is not generally apparent—that the desire for this technical education began a long time
