In a year from the time of the misand although cries were made against the "Foreign Devil," the "Blackbearded Barbarian," and a threat was made beating the converts, the people ontented themselves with yells, jeers faith in clear, decisive tones. But it would be impossible in a brief newspaper article to give even an outline of this great chapter the history of missions which Dr. Mackay describes so graphically inhis fascinating book, "From Far Formosa." SCAFFOLD POLES TO HIRE. One of Various Interesting Features of the Pole Fard Business.

"Scaffold Poles to Hire." So read a sign painted on the end of a building standing in a pole yard, and man whose eye chanced to fall upon it wondered just what it meant. He had I heard of renting ateam bollers and planes [(a) and horses and railroad cars and so on, and he knew that there is scarcely anything, perhaps nothing, that cannot be I (rented, but he had never beard before odd fhing to do. As a matter of fact there are lots of scaffold poles rented. It is an old and those who have occasion to know about it familiar branch of the pole yard

Scaffold poles are rented, of course, most largely to builders, and there are more builders who hire scaffold poles than there are who own them. This for the simple reason that it is for most buildbuilders who must have a racd anyway in which to keep material and plant of one sort and another own their own scaffold poles and keep them when not in use in their own yard where they have room for them. The smaller builder, having very likely no material yard, has no convenient place ! te store poles when not in use, and he bires poles, as for that matter some of ill

the larger builders do also. Scaffold poles are let at so much for a job, whether it is a few days or weeks, but while a builder keeps the poles for one price on one job as long as he may need them he cannot if he gets through with a job early haul the poles off to set up on another job without paying more

The life of a scaffold pole is about six years. A pole yard man said that they could be made to last ten years by care. People always drive nails into scaffold poles. These nails rust, and the wood goes to decay. If the poles were all when they came back to the yard from a would last four years longer, but this is not done for the simple reason that it wouldn't pay. The cost of the work would be greater than the gain by it, and so they use the poles as long as they are fit to use and then chop them up.
