Fondness For Such Pranks. "I never indulge the practical joke habit," said a gentleman who is visiting the city, "and I have a good reason for taking no sort of stock in such things. There was a time in my life when I was fond What the People are Talking of playing pranks, and I have turned some clever tricks along this line. But it has been several years since I made my last effort. I was living in a small town up in Arkansas and at the time was boarding with an aunt, who was even fonder of the practical joke than I was, Along about Christmas time a young man came out to the town in which I lived to spend some time with his friends. "My aunt was quick to perceive his weakness. She hatched a plot. I was to slip into his bedroom and steal the watch and chain after he had fallen asleep. The night was fixed, and my friend retir ed about 10 o'clock. He always hung his vest, which contained his watch and chain and other valuables, on the bedpost at the head of the bed. My aunt knew exactly where I could find it, and about 10:20 I slipped stealthily into the room, found the vest and began to rifle the pockets. My friend raised up quickly as he ran his hand under his pillow. Bang. bang, bang! I was shot. I was shot three times, with the revolver pressed almost against my breast. I could feel the boles in my back where the bullets had come out, and the blood was trickling down my spinal column. My aunt came rushing into the room. 'My God!' I said. Auntie, I'm shot.'

"She got the camphor bottle. I told Her the bullets had passed clear through me and had rolled down into my shoes. They could stand it no longer, and, to my amazement, my aunt and my friend broke out in a perfect spasm of laughter, and by degrees the real situation dawned on me. My friend had expected my visit. He had extracted the lead from three cartridges in the pistol, at the suggestion of my aunt, and had turned the tables on mc. Since that time I have played no
