An Order For His Arrest That Was Not Executed.

It is not generally known, perhaps, that Senator Morgan of Alabama was once threatened with arrest for alleged complicity in the assassination of Lincoln, Of course Senator Morgan was not only innocent, but actually did not hear of Lincoln's death until a week after it had occurred. He was then a farmer in Dallas county, his practive of the law having been prohibited by the federal thorities, and he was plowing corn when he heard that an order had been received by General McArthur, at Selma, to ar-
