AT THE GRAVE OF SIR JOHN

THE GREAT STATESMAN FITTINGLY REMEMBERED.

The Ninth Anniversary of His Death — Fine Floral Tributes From Macdonald Clubs and Conservative M.P.'s.

"I like that Saxon phrase which calls
The burial ground—'God's Acre!' It is just;
It consecrates each grave within its walls,
And breathes a benison o'er the sleeping dust."

And as the little knot of men gathered on this bright June day around the green plot on a gentle slope in fair Cataraqui cemetery, to pay fitting respect to the memory of "the sleeping dust," —to the memory of Sir John Macdonald—it called to mind the qualities of the dead statesman which has made his name immortal. This was the tenth anniversary of his death, and each year sees the growing tribute of respect and love paid by hearts full of the memory of the past. Down through the generations men will honor the memory of this imperial statesman. Surely, this is true greatness, because it is lasting.

The ceremonies, which took place at 11 a.m., were arranged by the Macdonald club of Kingston, and were conducted at the grave by mayor Minnes. Within the sacred enclosure stood the mayor, Frederick Dunlop, aldermen Shaw, Harry Richardson, Rev. John Mackie, Dr. Ryan, J. R. Dargavel, of Elgin, Dr. W. T. Shaw, Montreal, P. C. Gordon, secretary of the Cataraqui iron works, and representatives of the News and Whig. Rev. John Mackie performed the invocation, referring to the dead in eloquent and fitting terms. It was an impressive prayer, and as the birds sang and pen stood uncovered about the grave mayor Minnes stepped forward and in choice phrase spoke touchingly.

"What more fitting memorial service," he asked, and what more pleasing reading than to do honor at the tomb and to pay a tribute to one we loved and lost awhile?

Why do we deck the grave with flowers?
And let it flourish fair a spell?
Of sculptured urns why do we build towers?
Because it is the custom well.
'Tis thus and not for the departed.
These loving memories commend
That soul, which never can be forced
Friends once beloved as living end.

"We stand here today at the grave of our departed chieftain, and recall to our minds the past, and with it the life of him who for so many years presided over the destinies of Canada, and whose life was linked with the life and progress of this country for nearly half a century. Sir John A. Macdonald was a man of transcendent ability, of broad views, of genial personality, and intense patriotism, and just at this present time when the bonds of the mother country and the colonies have been united into closer and happier union, we can recall Sir John A. Macdonald as an imperial statesman. His imperialism has always been recognized. 'A British subject I was born; a British subject I will die,' were his last sentiments. His first belief was that the success of this Canada of ours was dependent upon our permanent connection with the great empire of which we form a part. His was the grand imperial idea which binds to draw us closer to the great mother.

"No man had done more to weld together the masses. Equal rights for all, was his motto, irrespective of creed or color. As one of the fathers of confederation he succeeded in uniting the several scattered provinces in indissoluble and happy union. He has passed from our view to the great beyond, but his achievements shall live and his memory shall be cherished and kept green in our hearts as the years roll on.

"That man's good name, who rests in death,
Like odorous flowers on sorrow's air,
To us shall sweet and lovely be
In everlasting memory."

Frederick Dunlop, second vice-president of the Macdonald club, placed the club's wreath upon the grave. It was in the form of a circle, composed of white roses and white carnations.

Dr. W. T. Shaw, of Montreal, extemporized on the Wesleyan college, and after a few other addresses Shaw was asked to say a few words. He stated that he had not the honor of being especially invited to this interesting function, but being casually present he readily consented, when requested, as an old Kingstonian, to pay a tribute of respect to one of Canada's greatest statesmen, and one who is Canadians of all parties and sects agreed to honor, a man, who, in new living, would be foremost in the great movement of imperial unity, now developing, a man whose unselfish devotion to the interests of our country has left us an inspiring example of broad-minded patriotism.

Ald. Shaw then placed on the grave a handsome floral tribute from the Macdonald club of Montreal. It was a large anchor made of yellow roses, white carnations and lilies of the valley. In placing it alderman Shaw said it was a tribute of the love that members of the club had for Sir John in life and the respect they had for his memory. If all the club members were present they would feel as theorems gathered about the grave did. Distance kept them absent, but their thoughts were present at the ceremony then being performed.

J. R. Dargavel, a prominent conservative of Elgin, who was present also spoke briefly, paying a tribute to the terms of the dead statesman. He lived in the hearts of the whole country, said Mr. Dargavel. Perhaps no parliamentary leader has ever lived who possessed the love and respect of his followers to such a degree as Sir John did. His dying words alone have done a great deal of good; they would ever be an incentive to the young men of our country. It was Sir John's aim to draw closer the bonds of empire, and the speaker believed that the wave of loyalty was now passing over Canada was largely owing to the example and teaching of this might statesman. The country was better because Sir John A. Macdonald lived.

Harry Richardson next placed a large circular wreath, sent by the conservative members of the commons, upon the grave of their dead leader. Dr. Ryan, as a representative of the senior executive of the conservative association, spoke in feeling terms. Sir John's great battle in life had at last been crowned with victory. The principles for which he fought are triumphant now—the building up of Canada and the consolidation of the empire. The history of his life can now be written for the great work has been accomplished. United we are in Canada and with the empire. What he has done shall never be undone.

Rev. John Mackie pronounced the benediction, and the ceremonies were over.

MATRON AND MAID.

Over $5,000,000 of Mrs. Hetty Green's enormous fortune is invested within a hundred feet of New York's city hall.

Mrs. Mary J. Furman of Nashville has bequeathed her estate, valued at from $200,000 to $250,000, to Stanford university.

Mrs. John Lowell of West Cornwall, Vt., celebrated her ninety-first birthday recently at a reunion of 165 of her descendants.

By the bequest of Miss Anna H. Man Providence is to come into possession of about $200,000 for the maintenance of Roger Williams park.

Mrs. Laura Holtschneider is the only woman alderman in Colorado and is now a candidate for the place of mayor of Buena Vista, that state.

Eleanor Farjeon, a granddaughter of Joseph Jefferson, though but 18 years old, is making a reputation as a writer of opera librettos in London.

Mrs. Russell Sage resigned as president of the Emma Willard association. The reason given was that her strength was inadequate to the demands of the office.

The late Mrs. Mary J. Furman, whose will left $25,000 to Vanderbilt university, also provided for a $20,000 monument to be erected over her grave and that the monument be taken care of by the university.

Annette Essinoff, the wife and pupil of Leschetizky, is a Russian and is one of the most eminent women pianists of the day. Paderewski is said to have declared that he learned more from her playing that from the teaching of her husband.

Miss Phil Pointer of Owensboro has been chosen sponsor to represent Kentucky at the national reunion of Confederate Veterans at Louisville May 30 to June 3. She is the daughter of the late Phil Pointer and is a brunette of striking beauty.

Miss Hester D. Jenkins, daughter of J. H. Jenkins, president of the German National bank of Oshkosh, Wis., has been appointed professor of English in the American college at Constantinople. Miss Gwan Griffiths of the University of Chicago has been appointed to the chair of science at the same college.

Miss Bessie Shirley of Salt Lake City is doubtless the only woman in the world who owns and edits a mining journal. She is but 19 years old. The paper she runs she established herself and has made a success of it. She makes weekly trips to all the neighboring mining centers in search of news and is said to have a good deal of influence.

THE HONEY MAKERS.

In breeding bees the two main points desired are usefulness and color.

Any queen cell after being sealed over can be hatched with artificial heat.

In order to obtain nice comb honey the colony must be very strong in numbers.

A weak colony will never build nice comb honey no matter how liberal the honey flow.

If the colony is weak and the brood chambers not at all full, it is of no use to place the section boxes on.

If a good flight cannot be had reasonably soon after dysentery sets in, the bees are pretty sure to be lost.

Extracted honey is much easier cared for than comb honey. If properly cared for, it will keep good for years.

If one does not practice clipping the queen bees, he is almost certain to be bothered with swarms clustering in difficult and inaccessible places or going off.

If by any means a colony is deprived of their queen, the bees will set to work and raise another if only they have any worker larvæ in the hive with which to do it.

Transferring can be done with more ease and with better results in the spring, as at that time the occupants of the hive are fewest in number and the combs are lightest.—St. Louis Republic.

THE PEDAGOGUE.

President Eliot of Harvard is to spend a month at the Paris exposition.

President Faunce of Brown university announces that the class of '59 has raised a contribution of $1,000 to the general endowment fund of the university.

Brown university has 2,550 living graduates from a total of 5,115. Rhode Island has 940 of them, Massachusetts 614, New York 236, and there is no state in the Union not represented by at least one.

Ex-Postmaster General William L. Wilson, president of Washington and Lee university, who was sent to Arizona last winter on account of illness from which he was not expected to recover, is now much better and will probably completely regain his former good health.

THE WRITERS.

John Gilmer Speed, the well known writer, is a grandnephew of the poet Keats.

Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett says that, although English by birth, she believes America is the place for work, and, therefore, does nearly all her writing in this country.

Not long ago a friend of Maurus Jokai, the Hungarian novelist, was taking him to task for the plainness of his apartments, to which Jokai replied: "I dislike all luxury except the luxury of leisure for brain work. Most men love luxury because they have no brains."

Secret of Youthful Faces.

Every woman has a festive desire to keep her youthful looks as long as possible, and the "secret of eternal youth" is a very simple thing to accomplish. Interest in life, excitement, something to do which keeps the mind active and a certain carelessness of temperament are the leading essentials beside which careful eating and drinking and regular habits are of very little importance. Activity accompanied by late hours and irregular habits of living is better than a listless, stagnant life, if there is any virtue in this theory of youth.

Codfish Balls.

Mix one box of shredded codfish to one pint of picked fish with one pint of stale bread crumbs; add one saltspoon of white pepper, the juice of one lemon and two whole unbeaten eggs. Work well together. It should be moist enough to hold together. When well mixed, form into balls, dip in egg and then into bread crumbs and fry in smoking hot fat. Serve with tomato sauce.

The immigration report for May just issued by commissioner McCreary, of Manitoba, shows that there were 5,000 arrivals, of whom 2,285 were adults, 1,055 females, 655 male children, and 700 female children.

THE MEN ARE IDENTIFIED.

WITNESSES AT AURORA KNEW CHICAGO BURGLARS.

Hearing Argument in Regard to the Ownership of Land in the Heart of Deseronto—Was Entail Barred by a Mortgage?

Toronto, June 6.—The police authorities have succeeded in finding witnesses at Aurora who fully identify the Chicago prisoners as the men wanted for the burglary of banks in various parts of the province. The extradition of the prisoners is assured. It will be remembered that the men who cracked the safes at Aurora are satisfactorily connected with the attempt on the Standard bank in Parkdale by the finding of the revolver taken from policeman Ward on the night of the hold-up there, beside the horse and rig stolen during the Aurora raid.

The Ontario medical association, at its opening session this afternoon, elected Dr. Adam Wright president, in succession to Dr. J. E. Graham, who died last year, shortly after his accession to office.

The court of appeal is still engaged in hearing argument in a case involving the ownership of 100 acres of land in the heart of the town of Deseronto. The land was left in 1851 by John Culbertson to his son, Archibald, and heirs, in entail. About ten years ago the son sold the land to persons who cut it up into building lots. Now Culbertson's daughters claim that he had no right to sell. Justice Ferguson held on trial that entail was barred by a mortgage in 1859 and the court of appeal is considering that feature.

Dr. Bryce, of the provincial board of health, is of the opinion that the small pox outbreak at Port Arthur has been effectually quelled, as no new cases have been reported from there for the past ten days.

The third annual decoration of Sir John Macdonald's monument in the Queen's park took place this afternoon in magnificent weather. A tremendous crowd turned out to witness the proceedings. The floral decorations were many and beautiful. Among them were wreaths sent by the local legislature and the dominion government. When the ceremony of decorating the monument was concluded, speaking began. The list of speakers embraced the names of Hon. George E. Foster, M.P., Hon. J. P. Whitney, M.P.P., J. H. G. Bargeron, M.P., R. L. Borden, M.P., G. V. McInnis, M.P., N. Clarke Wallace and W. H. Hoyle, M.P.P.

AWFUL PLUNGE.

Lightning Rod Gives Way—Falls 250 Feet, Dying Instantly.

Cold Springs, June 6.—"Steeple Jack" Stephen W. Romaine, while repairing the steeple of the Methodist church here, fell to the ground, a distance of 250 feet. He was almost instantly killed. He was at the top of the steeple and was clinging to the lightning rod when it gave way. Romaine was twenty-four years of age and resided with his beloved mother in Yonkers.

The foundrymen and locomotive works employees were given a half holiday this afternoon to enable them to attend the funeral of Mrs. Alexander Carr, whose husband is a machinist in the locomotive works. A Moving Sale

In about fourteen days we move from the good old corner to the store across the street, lately and for many years occupied by the well known dry goods firm of J. Q. Hardy & Co. Our new store, now in course of erection, will not be ready to occupy for several weeks. The Standard Bank manager desires our present premises, as they also intend making extensive improvements which will take months to complete. We desire to move as little as possible, so for the next fourteen days will offer great and wonderful bargains in many lines to cash buyers.
