A WARNING FROM HUGHES. Col. Hughes, of Lindsay, and one of the conservative members who could not follow his leader on the Yukon question, has something to say in justification of his course in his paper, the Warder. During the last four years the party has, he says, presented a sad spectacle owing to the conduct of some of its leaders. Sir John Macdonald used to consult his followers, in the commons and in the senate, and sometimes the representative men outside of parliament, but, "in the present instance the grand old conservative party, B.
