These were placed around the hips with a slight dip in front Five other rows were sewed in a zigzag line around the entire waist. The front of the waist was slightly pouched, whil the back was in form of a short, round basque. There was a V shaped opening it front, filled with white satin. The stock was white satin, and the tie was of black lace with ruffled ends. It was a very refined gown and a tasteful one, much mor so than one shown at the same place with much more pretension. This was of ivory white cloth, there being a bias flounce of ivory white and red striped taffeta. Just under the edge was a straight plaited ruffle of the The sleeves had chatelaine cuffs of the silk, and there was a fulled vest front of the same added to the close basque waist. With this there was one of the newest of the spring capes of the same material as the gown and braided with soutache of exactly the same shade.

Capes are not so full as they were, and many scarcely reach the elbow. Some only cover the shoulders. There are many new ideas in capes, dolmans being one style and mantles another. There are also mantelets which are made with much ruflling around the neck and bottom and with

To this was sewed a gathered flounce with a piping between. The waist was in blouse form, with inset folds of white linen. Frogs and loops of white cotton cord held the checked folds together over the white ones. There were a stock and tie of wash mull and a medici collar of the linen edged with a frill of Russian lace. The sleeves were tight to the shoulders, where there was a triple puff. The wrists extended in wide, flaring cuffs with ruffles of lace on the inside. This class of goods is peculiarly adapted to this style of development as it is solid and looks like wool or poplin.

The tunic flounce grows in popularity. It has a graceful sweep that endears it to the bears of woman, for, however wide its sweep, it is never combersome like the Bir. of some kind of material always differing to a regular vest, but the most of them are to be simply fastened at the waist line. On the outside of the blouses and also tallor made waists there is a small watch pocket set. Bowknot pins are also worn to hold a little watch.

Tailor made wraps in light colors have cut strap strips stitched on, and in many instances these are decorated with small mother of pearl buttons, sewed on in clusters and in breton style. Many of the silk and poplin capes have enormous puffed boas of hemmed silk muslin, and the dolman capes have enormous bows with many loops set at the bend of the waist in the back. Half long basques in two or three instances were ornamented with to Brockville. three flounces of silk matching in color

One long wrap was made double breasted and fastened with large smoke pearl buttons, only three on each side, and these set low down. There were half capes instead of sleeves and a bood at the back, with a plain turndown collar at the neck and two sharp revers. The stuff was elephant gray cravatiefte. The whole was really elegant. The same design was developed in a large brown yellow and green plaid twilled wool. In both cases the garment reached the ground. The half princess redingote is a favorite for traveling, as it is made with snug back and straight fronts and space for pockets. Ameng the light stuffs for summer the lace striped lawns and organdles are the prettiest and most delicate I have ever seen. The lace stripe is not, as heretofore, a sort of a twisted canvaslike openwork but a stripe exactly resembling a piece o
