ONE YEAR WITH HARD LABOR sentence Given Prisoners For Trying To

The county court re-opened at 9:45 o'clock this morning. Six penitentiary convicts, John Ireburn, Louis Lawrence, D. Weise, W. O Connor, Ford and James Farwell, were called and the first four pleaded "guilty" to charges of attempting to escape, and the other two "not guilty." Nash did not make quite a fortune, etill by a quick move they saved themselves a neat little sum. Reading in an American paper on Monday that on the day following a revenue war tax of $3.66 per thousand a revenue war tax of $3 66 per thousand would go into effect in the United States on cigarettes, and being in need of a few for their trade on the river boats they set the telegraph wires at work in an attempt to place an order. Every firm in northern New York handling eigarettes was com-Watertown, replied that it would fill the order. Next morning Joseph Nash went over to Watertown and closed a deal for 30,000 eigarettes, paying for them and receiving shipping bills for Clayton. Evi dently the firm was not aware that the war tax had already gone into effect. Before returning to the city this sharp young financier had disposed of 10,000 of the lot at an advance figure, retaining 20,000, the number exempted from the war tax. By the deal the two Nash boys saved a few cents over $113, and adding the profit made by the sale of the 10 000 eigarettes, they made a respectable day's pay.
