I stepped back and before he recovered himself I had put out my right squarely on the left point of his jaw. It was what I was waiting for. Lucky blow? No. I was laying for it and got it just as I wanted it. I did not expect to get this chance to put it on Peter so soon. I rather expected to use it about the third round.' "Did he punch hard?"

> my face it did not have any serious effect. Peter is a good, hard, game fighter, and I am sorry he made such a poor showing. J did not find him any harder to whip than he was when I whipped him before. It was said, I hear, that I was nearly fagged out. This is a great mistake. There was no time that I did not have supreme confidence in my ability to whip my antagonist.
