The Emperor Napoleon - -

At one time consulted his leading generals as to what he most needed to carry on a successful war.

"Money," replied the officer.

"What next?" inquired Napoleon.

"Money," was the answer.

"Well what else?" insisted Napoleon.

"More money," was the emphatic reply That's it.

MONEY Moves the World

We all need money, not only during these hard times, but upon all other occasions. But at no time does a man require so little money as when buying our Serviceable Footwear.

Read All In The Inside Pages.

The WHIG to-day has a large amount of local matter on page two. There will be found a report of the high court proceedings, the addresses to be delivered to the governor-general and Countess of Aberdeen and sketches of the valedictory addresses at Queen's university.

Want To Be Consistent.

Ald. McKelvey says that he is not in favor of giving the parks committee $1,500. He thinks $1,000 is sufficient. The reason the Orphans' home was not recommended for a grant was because the council had refused to subsidize an institution doing a similar work. The committee want to be consistent.

THE CASE SETTLED.

The Libel Suit Came Before the Judge This Afternoon.

At 1:30 o'clock this afternoon the case of L. W. Shannon vs. Edw. J. B. Pense was called. After the jury was named, accepted and sworn J. McIntyre, Q.C., made his opening charge saying that the action was brought by L. W. Shannon, proprietor of the "News," against Edw. J. B. Pense, proprietor of the BRITISH WHIG. It is styled an action of libel because it is alleged Mr. Pense uttered and published in his newspaper certain defamatory statements which he circulated among his subscribers. The plaintiff has been proprietor of the "News" for many years. There has been a great deal of cross-firing against each other by the proprietors. This has been going on for some time. It may be said that as the cross-firing had been going on for years there is no libel and no damages can be attached to either of them. The plaintiff mentioned some things in his paper with regard to defendant, but what he wrote was written many years ago, and the statute of limitation should be accepted, and the matter he considered outlawed. Plaintiff claims he and his family had been continually attacked through the columns.—

Mr. Whiting—The action is not brought in behalf of the characters of the members of the family.

Mr. McIntyre—Mr. Shannon has been attacked frequently within the past few years and he wanted the attacks stopped, and this is all he wanted. If Mr. Pense will say that he will undertake to agree that he will not defame Mr. Shannon any more he will settle the case at once.

The judge—They had better both agree and be good boys one to another.

Mr. Pense addressed the court and said: "I have never attacked the plaintiff on any case unless I have been aggravated. I am so conscientious in this matter that with the bible in my hand I will say he has been the aggressor four times out of five.

Mr. Shannon—There has been no attack in the "News" against Mr. Pense except in respect to his public life.

The judge—Editors differ as to what is a libellous attack. I think the editors might stop this quarrelling, and turn their hose on the public at large.

Mr. McIntyre—It they would turn them on Mr. Whiting it would do him good.

Judge—I dare say they turn the hose on him sometimes and if they do he is a very lucky man.

Mr. Whiting—Mr. Pense is willing to enter into a contract with Mr. Shannon if he will agree to refrain from first attacking him (Mr. P—.)

The judge—There are plenty of subjects that can be discussed except personal matters. There is no necessity for personal allusions. There are plenty of reforms to be advocated and plenty of things to occupy the attention of editors. If the gentlemen of the press will devote themselves to public matters and refrain from descending to personalities it would be far better. He quoted a Scotch saying which runs:

"One crow must not pick out another crow's ey
