> Canvassing is not sourted by the man who has a record on which he can stand and on which he has a right to expect the public support. The man who really does his duty has no need to tell the peoif continued in public office. Butthat man is reduced, seemingly, to the necessity of soliciting the electors' favor or taking his chances of being defeated, for there are so many who desire to have the candidate, recognize their power, forgetful that the election is only the prelude to a year of toil, and that those who serve ciently are worthy of reward.

But sanvassing is not only degrading to the candidates-it not only means a bumiliation the faithful representative of the people should not be expected to undergo-but it is a nuisance when followed by those who do not understand the ordinary proprieties of life., There is 'n the mind's eye a case of recent occurrence in this city, where an aggressive candidate not only disturbed the quiet of evrtain homes in the dead of night, but in one instance pushed his the night, and engage in the modern the planter and the farmer are the most presence into rooms where men sought rest in sleep.
