LISTOWEL, Oct. 27.-The train arriving Almeda Chattelle. Crowds thronged the way, to the station. By a ruse of the authorities, however, a back was employed and met the train where the railway crosses the road some distance from town. A crowd assembled at the jail on arrival of the back carrying the prisoner, and as he was being nurried into the cell cries of "Mang him!" "Lynch him!" and similar expressions were heard, and for a time there appeared indications of trouble, but the prisoner securely in the cell of the jail. The adjourned /inquest was then proceeded with. The prisoner occupied a sest at the right of the coroner, and was dressed the same as on Tuesday when he was brought on the platform at the depot here. The proceedings commenced by an examination by the jury of the articles in the value, and also those found on the prisoner when arrested. After hearing all the evidence the coroner's jury handed in a verdict of wilful murder against the prisoner, Almede Chattelle. The evidence given was very cohelusive. Constable McCarthy was first called. Her recognized the articles found on the prisoner as those he was entrusted with on Tuesday last when prisonor was handed over to him by Constable Travis. Constable Robert Woods profuced the celebrated black value and

fled to having seen prisoner. Miss Carrie Lantz, near Listowel, testified to having given prisoner a lunch on the day of the murder. He afterwards went in the direction of the railroad track and distant from the scene of the murder less than a mile. Thomas Johnston, residing at the same place as the last witness, also testified that from where he met the prisoner a man walking an-ordinary pace could reach the scene of the tragedy in about 25 minutes. Robert Morris, of this town, saw the prisoner in two different places on the day the murder was committed. The last time ten minutes walk from the place. Dr. Rutherford said the cause of death was due to loss of blood from the cut i throat, and detailed a fechnical description of the condition of the body when

A number of other witnesses were called and their evidence taken, some of them having seen the prisoner before and others after the murder. The evidence taken as a whole was very complete and left no doubt as to the criminality of the prisoner. The route he went has been indicated by the witnesses nearly the whole distance from Ailsa Craig to Listowel, thence to

The prisoner was next arraigned before a magistrates' court, consisting of Police Magistrate Techune and Mayor Featherone. Much of the evidence taken by the coroner's jury was gone over. The magistrate charged him under the section in the revised statutes which gives the prisoner an opportunity to make a statement, and warned him that anything he might say might be used against him. He replied that he was guilty and had nothing else to say. Then he was removed to the cell. where he was stripped and his clothing examined. Many blood stains were found

A number of constables were on hand and the prisoner was suddenly rushed through and into the cate tinted shades and hack. A large rock followed in dangerous have plain and moire proximity and narrowly escaped hitting persons in the crowd. He was driven off silks, ribbons, velvets, at full speed to the station, followed by a turbulent crowd. At the station the train was not yet in and the prisoner was taken into the depot, where he remained closely guarded until its arrival. The crowd here was very demonstrative and seemed dangerous. All sorts of cries him," "Hang him," "Use the rope,"

"Throw him under the train," etc. The officers ran him down the platform, followed by the crowd, and at the car steps a There was no organized leader, but a few men the worse of liquor called for voluncers to follow them into the car and take. ew his revolver and Chief McCarthy, of ratford, narrowly escaped falling under the car. For ten minutes the train remain ed, during which many inflammatory threats were made by the crowd. Finally, at 10,40 the train pulled out, followed by wild and derisive cries from the mob.
