A Mad Whiri In The Madison Gardens-The Banging Of Pugs On Coney Island-Death Of a Noble Woman-The Crinoline Is Out In New York.

New York, Feb. 17,-The ball of the arele Francaise is a great event, not only in a certain class of French societyor I suppose I might say, an uncertain class-but also with a class of bald-headed old ainners, to whom years of unsavory.experience have brought neither may be added, our golden youth-heaven save the mark, who never knew what i lives, and who now are busy blowing out the old man's money, grubbed and pinched through long years of penurious life. to be squandered at last on gamblers and harlots, at just such disreputable mobs as that which composed the greater part of the French ball on Monday night, Don't imagine for a moment, that I write in general condemnation of all French society here; nothing could be further from my thoughts. We have in New York a circle of society almost exclusively French-brilliant, hospitable, wealthy and of the very highest ment was not out at the Madison Square Garden the other night. What that peculiar element in our make up, that silently impels us to see things that we ought not to do? I suppose we inherited it from old mother Eve, for we all have a touch of it. The night was around the portals of our great Casino on | on September 15th. Consequently that any mortal man or woman would

What is it that urges this struggling, surging mob onward as they fight and depended on it. It is early yet, don't be in such a hurry; what little respectability there is in this ball now has possession of the floor. Don't be in a hurry-Shoel is not let loose till after. midnight. Come let us look around and of color reflected by the electric lights makes the floor look like a vast kaleidoscope as the crowd whirls through the mazes of the dance. Wickedness is in the air and poisons it; nothing pure and good can live here long. All the low concert halls, and variety shows have contributed their flashy and disreputable contingent. The moral lazarettos of the Tenderioin have a splendid representation-clad in purple and fine linen, jewels and gold, and for one night in the year all the gambling hells and faro banks that the police could not find are closed. They are here, the dealer, croupier, capper and the plucked goose, to swell the devil's carnival. The thin disguise that veiled the company early in the evening is melting away; the wine and stronger liquors have begun to work and the police who were placed there by our careful superintendent Byrnes to preserve decorum and the peace have prudently retired to the refreshment rooms to partake of the good cheer of their hospitable hosts.
