WANTED HER HUSBAND DEAD.

A Wealthy French Woman Anxious to Rid Herself of An Encumbrance.

PARIS, March 2.—An extraordinary case, which will no doubt rank as one of the most interesting causes celebres of the year, is now being investigated by the police authorities at Lorient. The case is to be tried by the Morbihan Court of Assizes.

Mme. Berthe Crouan is accused of attempting to cause the murder of her husband, Omare Crouan, against whom she was engaged in a suit of separation.

The supposition of a crime rests on the declarations made by some street porters at Lorient, who were found to be possessed of a comparatively large sum of money, which they declared was transmitted to them as the price of killing M. Crouan in such a way that it would appear to be an accident.

The street porters declared that they had considered it more prudent not to do the deed, with a prudence no doubt similar to that which induced them to keep the money.

On the strength of these declarations warrants for the arrest of Mme. Crouan and her servant, Marie Cristen, were issued, but Mme. Crouan escaped to Switzerland.

At length, tired of living away from France, Mme. Crouan wrote from Geneva that she intended to give herself up a prisoner. She has been, in fact, of her own free will imprisoned in Lorient jail.

Mme. Crouan is the daughter of a very wealthy contractor, M. Brian, who has compiled an enormous fortune by his own efforts. A greater part of his energy characterized his daughter, who was, it appears, disappointed early in life about a marriage she wished to make. M. Brian lived about 20 or 30 years ago at the Chateau de la Madeleine, near Varades (Loire-Inferieure).

When the marriage on which Mlle. Brian had set her heart had been forbidden and put a stop to by her father she was affianced to Omare Crouan, an engineer, who was closely connected with M. Brian in his business relations.

M. Brian announced to her future husband that it was dangerous for him to be the accomplice of her father in opposing her will. But the threat appeared to M. Brian to be due simply to the petulance of youth.

They were married and two children were born, for which their mother had a strong and unbounded affection.

Unhappily, this love does not appear to have extended to her husband, and in 1890 Mme. Crouan formed a liaison with M. Kerneur, who exercised the profession of teacher in a riding school.

For a time the liaison was kept secret, but at the expiration of a few months Mme. Crouan and M. Kerneur took the children of the former and fled to Paris. M. Crouan followed them, found them and after treating his wife with much leniency induced her to go and live with him again.

But in January, 1891, M. Crouan was deserted again and the guilty pair, traveling incognito as man and wife, visited Nice, Mentone and Monte Carlo. After much trouble M. Crouan found them and obtained the guardianship of the children.

During the last summer vacation M. Crouan stayed with the children at Belle-Isle-en-Mer and Mme. Crouan at Quiberon. The mother was to see her children every fortnight. They took the boat for Quiberon in the morning and returned to Belle-Isle at night.

On one occasion they did not arrive; they had missed the boat and had been obliged to stay at Quiberon all night.

M. Crouan was, however, not fully reassured by this explanation, and decided in future to accompany the children. While they were with their mother he used to pass the time walking about the cliffs. It was while thus engaged that the street porters say they were paid to see that he had a fatal accident.

The affair is at present being thoroughly investigated by the police. It is expected that many sensational revelations will be made at the trial with reference to the career of Mme. Crouan. It should be added that M. Kerneur is not implicated in the affair.

A SAILOR'S BIGAMY.

His First Wife is Living in Toronto—He is Committed.

BUFFALO, N.Y., March 2.—James Duffy, who was married in Toronto a dozen years ago and about three years ago duplicated that occurrence with a woman in this city, was up in the Police Court yesterday charged with bigamy.

Duffy claims that his first wife is dead, and was dead before he married the Buffalo woman.

Toronto police say Mrs. Duffy No. 1 is alive and living in that city, and the judge held that the evidence was sufficient to send the case to the grand jury. Duffy was admitted to bail in $500.

Harvard's Benefactor.

BOSTON, Mass., March 2.—It is stated on the authority of a Harvard professor that Gordon McKay, the millionaire inventor and manufacturer, is the man who has left between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000 in trust to Harvard University.

Mr. McKay formerly lived in Cambridge and there he perfected most of his inventions, such as the McKay sewing machine, the heeling machine, the stitcher and the McKay metallic fastener. Much of his spare time was spent in the study of music, of which he was a great lover. He owned a rare collection of old violins.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning March 5 Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—The Lord's day. How shall we keep it? Neh. xiii, 22; Math. xii, 8-13. "Sanctify the Sabbath day." Neh. xiii, 22.

1. The Sabbath day. The oldest institution of the world is the Sabbath or Lord's day. It is almost as old as creation. Born on the seventh day of time, christened amid the thunderings of Sinai, observed as sacred and holy by Christ and His disciples, it has all the marks of divinity upon it. If venerableness adds anything of interest or worth to the customs of men, surely it should be accorded to the Sabbath day. It has outlasted the patriarchal altars, witnessed the decay of sacred monuments, survived the tabernacle, temples and gorgeous sacrifices, and after almost 19 Christian centuries it is still honored and revered of men. Its future history is as certain as its past history, because it is divine. Nor will it end with the end of time, for the Scripture tells us of a rest or Sabbath that remains to the people of God beyond this life. All honor, then, to that which always has been, which is and always will be—namely, the Christian Sabbath!

2. Why should the Sabbath be kept? There are many reasons. God observed it and commanded it to be observed. Christ observed it and illustrated the true spirit in which all should observe it. It is necessary to the best physical, mental and moral development of man. God did not institute the Sabbath for divine benefit. "The Sabbath was made for man." Man needs it. The individual needs it. The nation needs it. The world needs it. The toilers in the field, the factory and workshop need it. Nor is it less necessary to the one who labors with his mind. A Sabbath given to the soul is the best of all means for refreshing the intellect of man. The soul needs the Sabbath—both the soul of the saint and the sinner.

3. How should the Sabbath be kept? This is a much discussed question today. Some perhaps are too conservative and others too liberal. It should not be observed in such a way as to make its only virtue that it comes but one day in seven. On the other hand, no such spirit of carelessness, of disregard, should characterize it as to do away with all the sacred claims it has upon us. It is the Lord's day and should in some way be devoted to Him. As its name signifies, it is a rest day, and as such we should keep it holy. On that day we should rest from the labors and pleasures of the other six days; rest because we need rest and this seventh portion of time to devote to God. That the body and mind may have true rest, and that the soul may receive the highest benefit from the Lord's day, we should spend the time in public worship of God, fellowship and communion with the members of our own families, quiet reading and meditation of God's holy word. Thus only can we "sanctify the Sabbath day."

The External Appearance of Jesus.

I have often wondered what the external appearance of Jesus was like—whether He was tall and slender or short of stature, and whether He was emaciated on account of His frequent fasts and the great burdens resting upon Him. Especially have I wondered what His face was like—whether it was a sweet face which, once seen could never be forgotten, or whether, as some tradition says, there never was a smile upon it.

Is there anything wrong in such a thought as this? Does it not seem natural that when one reads so much about the words and acts of Jesus, and knows that a nobler, kinder being never lived, he should wonder as to the expression of His face, the color of His eyes and hair, and meeting Him upon the highway would men be attracted by the beauty of His face or would they be impressed by His homeliness?

While going up and down the Holy Land I thought much about the external appearance of Jesus and wondered whether anywhere in that country I should meet a face that would in some measure answer to my idea of the Christ. In the crowded streets of Jerusalem, in the Garden of Gethsemane, at the Pool of Siloam, at the supposed site of Calvary north of the Damascus gate, at Bethlehem, Nazareth, and as we wound along the beaten paths of travel among the hills and over the plains, I kept my eyes open for a picture of the Christ.

Leaving the camp at Tiberias early one morning for a walk northward along the sea I came upon a man standing apparently in deep meditation upon a rock. His hair was long, his figure slight, his countenance sad, his eyes piercing and yet full of tenderness. There seemed to be something about him that aroused strange feelings within my heart. Had I seen the Christ? I have tried to forget that face and form, and yet it clings to me. Whatever the form of Jesus may have been, I know this—that there never was one that came so near my ideal as this.—Rev. E. Herbruck, Ph. D.

Mother, Is Your Baby Suffering From Defective Digestion?

Defects and derangements among infants and young children are common ailments, and they complicate a great variety of disease. It would be well if mothers thoroughly realized the truth of this statement.

When baby is restless, cross and irritable, it is safe to say that the little darling is suffering from some defect in digestion, brought about by improper dieting. In our experience, the common prepared foods sold in many localities are the cause of all trouble. These foods, owing to their crude and imperfect composition, would give dyspepsia or indigestion to an adult if they were used for a week.

Just imagine their terrible effect on the weak and delicate stomach of an infant! Is it any wonder that so many of those tender buds find an early grave?

To secure perfect and regular digestion, the most eminent doctors of Canada are prescribing Lactated Food for the infant and young generally. The best analytical chemists affirm, without hesitation, that Lactated Food contains more nourishing and building-up properties than any other now sold. These facts should influence every mother to give her babe the best, as life and strength depend upon wise infant dieting.
