The police place a good deal of reliance on the identification bureau recently established in Chicago by George M. Porteous. Mr. Porteons has visited all the principal positentiaries of the country and secured photographs and Bertilion measurements of all criminals whose terms expire before the close of the exposition. As fully one half the prisoners discharged from jail during the past six months applied for transportation to Chicago, Mr. Porteous' bureau is likely to be kept reasonably howy. One of the most accomplished pickpockets the Chicago police expect to be called upon to cope with is one Mollie Matches, with aliases too numerous to mention. Like the "man of many frees" sometimes
