POLICE COURT-FRIDAY

The Cases Brought to Col. Daff's Attention This Morning. James Norris was up for an infraction | with the performance. of the bridge act this morning. The constable on duty at the bridge testified that Mr. Norris trotted his horse over the bridge. Mr. Norris claimed that he did not do so, to his knowledge. His horse might have started off for a couple of steps, but that was all. Mr. Norris said he could prove that the constable was not doing his duty properly. If he, Norris, had done as some others had done, he would not have been hauled up in court. The magistrate explained that such a complaint would have to be made to the bridge company and stated that the practice of trotting over the bridge had to be discouraged. He made the fine
