A Prophecy Unfulfilled Brockville Becorder. In 1882, in his budget speech, Sir Leonard Tilley predicted that in 1890 our national debt could not exceed $208. 000,000, that in all probability by the date mentioned it would be reduced by the sale of north-west lands to $100,000, 000. This prediction has been buried as deeply under the drifting blizzard of tory extravagance as the promise he made in 1878 to govern the country with $22,500,000. The tory administrations that have ruled since 1878 have proved debt-builders, not debt-reducers. When 1890 came round the veteran financier was in a position to ascertain that his prediction was only $137,000,000 astray -that instead of the debt being reduced which is so slow of action, however, from $153,661,000 in 1882 to $160,000,that unless some tremendous reaction 000 in 1890 it had been rolled up at the $237,533,000, and that at the present attained. The debtor class of Siam afford a great contrast to all this gorgeousness. They are stripped naked, and, chained to heavy logs, are compelled to work as slaves. The interest on money is so high in Siam that when a man once gets in debt the most he can possibly hope for by the hardest kind of work is to pay the interest on what he owes. This has discouraged industry and has encouraged the practice of allowing women to do the work. Man, being proud and ambitious, soon tires of industry indulged in for its own sweet

He is at present a mangy, scraggy, wild-eyed creature, with nothing white about him but his ears, which seem to have leprosy. His keepers are dirty, he is not bound with golden chains, and the only thing royal about him is his bad temper. The temples and palaces of Siam are structures of complicated magnificence.
