Lospon, Sept. 2 .- The House, of Com rule last night in order that the third reading of the Home Rule Bill might be com-

cluded before adjournment.

Justin McCarthy, leader of the Anti-Parnellites, was the first speaker. He said that although the bill did not have the pendantic character of finality, which its opponents contended any home rule measure must have, it contained finality in principle. When Ireland should get her National Parliament it would include finality in the true sense of the term. Irishmen so accepted the measure as a final adjustment of their leading grievance against Great Britain. Joseph Chamberlain, leader of the Liberal Unionists, while disclaiming all inten-tion of questioning Mr. McCarthy's sin-cerity, said that he could not forget how another leader of the Irish, after accepting a bill as a somplete settlement of the de-mands of Ireland, recanted and declared it was accepted only as a temporary instalment. "If this bill ever be passed, continued Mr. Chamberlain, "you will have the Irish coming to Parliament demanding more and more and putting pressure on Ministry after Ministry until at last some Ministry will be found weak enough or base enough to buy the Irish Irish vote by granting final separation. peroration. Mr. Balfour, Conservative leader, said that the House had not discussed threefourths of the Home Rule Bill either in committee or in the report stage. The length of the debate on the Reform Act of 1832 had been quoted to show that the discussion of the present bill had been exceedingly long. But the Reform Bill involved only two principles, the substituones and the settlement of the franchise whereon the electorate should vote. The present bill was an absolute reversal the constitution. It involved a change of every fundamental principle of the constitution. What was the prospect of gain to Ireland? The Irish members of Parliament had indulged in much destructive criticism of the landlords and the rish Government, but had never yet proluced a practical proposal likely to be of ermanent value and to relieve the oubles of the country they aspired to legislation. > Baby, Creep,' and others had a big sale. About eight months ago a wheelman's club in Milwankee got up a minatrel show. I had always written their end songs and ballads, so I promised to get up some new stuff for them. I had been here to Chicago and had danced all night at a ball on the west side. I reached home the next day, tired out, and was lying in my room when one of the amasaid he wanted a bran-new song for the show. I told him I had some good songs already written, but he didn't want any one of them. He wanted a song that no one had heard. I told him I was so used something. After he went away I tried night before. It struck me all at once that "After the Ball" would be a good title. I went across the street to a music store and asked if anyone had ever written a song called 'After the Ball.' The clerk said there was an instrumen-

"Returning to my room I mapped out the simple story and began to improvise a tune on the piano. In thirty minutes I had finished the whole thing and sent it to my amateur friend. It did not occur to me that the song would be popular, in fact I did not have a very high opinion of it. I simply rushed it through to oblige this friend of mine. On the night of the entertainment the two first verses took very well, but the singer forgot the third verse and for some reason this rather confirmed me in the opinion that the song was no good. "Next day a music dealer in Milwau-
