race the people were after.

Marshal France was the favorite, and $10 to $6 was given by his supporters. Considerable money had changed hands during the week on an even scale, but the possibilities of the grey horse on the field knocked betting in the head. General opinion was that France had an easy thing. He could out-foot the bay horse and consequently there was no show for the latter. To the public at large the result of the first two heats might infer that this was a scheme for betting, but to spectators another conclu-

Bayonet had the pole and got nearly a length. > The horses were given twenty minutes between heats and had not Mr. Folger given exhibitions with his colts the crowd would have become impatient. James Guess drove Rob of Rideau, the twenty-five months colt, around the ring a couple of times. This colt has shown a 2:22 gait and has a great future before him. He was much admired as was also Pauline, another Dr. Carver colt with a 2:28 gait and Aileen by the same sire who has been timed to 2:32. The second heat of the race ended about the same as the first, excepting that Bayonet was a little harder pushed on the home stretch. France did not break as often and when finally gaining his feet showed a fine burst of speed. France was not a horse to gain anything by a break. His driver held him in and the grey always lost by this sort of tacties. This heat was trotted even faster that the first. Bayonet broke once on the back stretch but quickly caught herself. The start was an even one and the coolest horse won. Reliable men caught the time at 2:37 min. The third heat was rushed on and to the surprise of every one the tables were turned. The impression that France was a stayer was proven only too true for the Bayonet men who made the bluffs after the first heat. The grey horse went out and with an even start "took the wind out of his adversary's sails." Both horses trotted well. A break or two from Bayonet did not matter much. The grey horse forged ahead coming home and won the heat by half a length. Excitement was now aroused and as good as $2 to $1, was given on the result of the next heat. The grey horse again came into favor and any amount was ready to back her. It looked like crooked work when one of the judges announced that on account of the darkness the race would have to be postponed till the morning. It was reasonable to conclude that Bayonet was played out and as Fred Metcalfo looked at it in this way he bespoke the sentiments of unprejudiced spectators when he said the race would have to go on. At one time it looked like a row between the sudges. There were two for and one against the race. Metcalfe, jr., won the ay and the horses were called out again

The motto of the order, tance vouchsafed within the bounds of the great brotherhood. "In a scriptural sense," he went on, "every man is my brother, and I am bound to succor him in distress, but I am the more warmly drawn towards one who is bound to me by peculiar ties, who has special claims upon my care, and upon whom I may lean in turn, in the infirmities of my flesh. There is system, and love and friendship in the services we are moved to perform. To the sick and the sorrowing the dying and the dead we have paid the needed attention, and there has been added the balm, which is sometimes better than friendship, better than love, the balm brought through the distribution of $45,000,000 among the beneficiaries of this order in the last twentyfive years." Reference was made to the essons taught in the lodge room, which was compared with the home, which was somewhat patterned after the home, and in which were discussed the things that concerned the wives and children as much as they concerned the men. The late Dr. Holland's poem, "Heaven is not reached at a single bound," was quoted in connection with the lesson of patience and perseverance which the order taught, in connection with the admonition that men should never weary in well-doing. "Finally," said Ald. Meek, "the movement among the fraternal societies is a great one. It affects villages and towns and cities, communities and continents. In every direction rises the song, 'Peace on Earth, Good will to Men.' On every hand there are the colors of some society, the bugle call to muster, the tramp, tramp, tramp of advancing forces. There is no telling how many men have peen enlisted in this great army. The three orders to which I bear allegiance number a million and a half, and in the other orders there are several millions more. And they are all facing and churches labor for the spiritual welfare of man, so all the fraternal societies labor for his physical and moral wellbeing. Some of us, belonging to several societies, are following several banners and loyal to each and all of them. But in the vanguard is the flag of our country, and we are all loyal to it and think it as did the Earl of Roseberry, when, in unveiling the memorial of Sir John Macdonald, in the presence of a distinguished company, in St. Paul's cathedral, London, he said : "It is what Apply to J. B. Munesty, P.O. Box and, or Teleit is because it represents everywhere peace and civilization and commerce, the negation of parrowness and the gospel of humanity."

W. H. Godwin, the newly appointed D.D.G.M. in Kingston district, referred to the unexpected honor which had been conferred upon him, and made reference to the progress of the A.O.U.W. in the surrounding country. He had been instrumental in extending the work in the carry all the responsibilities which office had brought to him.

The anniversary closed with "God Save the Queen," sung by the company.

He May and He May Not.

Yesterday afternoon Dr. Herald was asked if he would be a candidate for the mayoralty of 1804. He said he had not canvassed in a direct way. Friends had spoken to him about the matter, saying the workers; trop storything and handle it; they had been canvassed by other you will make money last; books ready; credit aspirants for the mayor's chair, and before promising would like to know if he me Dearborn St., Chicago, ill., or Phila . Pa. was a candidate. He generally replied that it would be better to wait and son who the candidates would be before they romised their votes. He did not think he would run for the council again as an alderman. The position did not suit his business. He had been a faithful servant of the city for three years, and having accomplished the purpose for which he entered the council, namely, the passing of a scheme which will en-MONTREAL, Oct. 27 .- The Richelien & sure for the citizens, in future, a better
