On returning from Chicago Mr. Swift got into conversation with a man who ran a bakery and restaurant on the show grounds, and with another man, one of the owners of the Ferris wheel. The man who ran the bakery said that he netted plenty of money. He made a specialty of serving baked beans. He purchased a great many barrels of beans, cooked them well and sold thousands of dishes at 6c each, while they only cost him a cent each.

From the above one would conclude that Mr. Mooers had been appointed an agent for Hooper but it seems that the prisoner has merely referred to the Kingstonian as the latter is secretary-treasurer of the Philatelic society of Canada and the United States. This society was organized by Hooper. When engaged the post office at Ottawa to collect stamps. He took a pride in the vocation and it was not long before he had quite a large collection, in fact the largest collection in Canada. It was only last year that Hooper sold his cole.

Mr. Mooers met Hooper at tous the Canadian society was organized. The probability is that philatelists who think Hooper innocent will subscribe a is president of the Canadian society. Since Hooper sold his collection Mr. Mooers has the largest collection of stamps in the dominion. Only recently he sold a number at a good price and made money on the deal.
