THE GAS WORKS TO-DAY. A Toroh Ignited the Clothing of William Humes and He was Burned to Death Before Rescued-The Details of the Awtul

Perhaps the most horrifying accident EVERY DAY sults that the Kingston papers have had to chronicle occurred at the gas works

The terture of a person THIS WEEK what must be the agony of mind experienced by a dozen or more noble-hearted men standing by unable to save the perishing not one foot distant. These are the circumstances that surrounds the death of William Haines, assistant gasmaker. Mr. Haines had been engaged during the morning rebuilding one of the generators. In order to do this it is ne ressary that the workmen get inside the GREAT - brick at the bottom. The generators are rebuilt periodically, generally once a month. Patrick Hart was in the gene-steaming about the size of an ordinary steaming bosier, with Mr. Haines, and the two men had nearly completed their in hearth gas-maker accidentally North American Lafe Insurance Co. vs. despress his torch. In steeping to pick it up his oily clethes became ignited and in an instant the unfortunate man was enveloped in flames. Hart happened to be nearest the exit and climbed out in a second. His mate was in a less fortunate position at the bottom of the generator which runs perpendicularly he could not reach the little door and with shrick's of and with shricks of pain suffering he resigned himself his fate. Hart lest no time in shouting and otherwise alarming the men, but all endeavors to rescue the poor man were in vain. As the brick had been built around the bottom door it was some time before this could be broken away. At least fifteen minutes had or one-half regular price clapsed before the charred remains were dragged out. The clothes had been Ladies Ribbet Fine Wood Vests, worth $1, for literally burned from the body, and the soc.

A With reporter was on the spot as All-Woot Press Goods, value 25e and See a yard the body was being removed and a more pitiable scene it would be hard to THOUSANDS OF BARGAINS all through imagine. It was quite obvious that the victim was a favorite with all. Superintendant Kerr found it very hard to talk, so full was he, while the general expression among the work-men was, "horrible, horrible," Some STEACY & STEACY. pany were in some way to blame, but investigation proves otherwise. Supt. Kerr stated with regret that it was not Sustomary for a workman to take a light into the generators when rebuilding or cleaning them. He would not have allowed it had he known Haines intended doing this. After forty-five years establishment it was painful that such a accident should occur. He had been most careful to watch the workmen and see that nothing went wrong. Accidents can easily occur around a gas works afterwards. The generator had been used a couple of days previously but there was no gas about it. It was undoubtedly shut off at the time. George Randall, another workman, had often to attend to the generators. When he went inspile he was very careful not to take a light with him. He could not have felt more keenly for a brother than he did for poor Haines. It was through his instrumentality that Haines entered the A.O.U.W. society. He accordingly had $2,000 on his life. Haines had been in the employ of the gas company for about two years. He was considered one of the Best workmen about the establishment, and the superintendent was always satisfied that he could be relied on to do his work properly and well.
