groined not moved for a long season. I was so weak that I was like one paralyzed.

After a minute or so the lion uttered a low growl and sat up for a better look at me.

While I was frightened almost to death, I said to myself, "I had seen enough to know that I was in a bad way."

There was no hope of hitting him, but I was not to be discouraged. I had to try.

My gun was 10 feet away, and we were perfectly helpless. Over my head, I saw a tiger.

He snuffed at my right hand, which lay beside me, and he sniffed at my left hand.

Down with it! He snuffed at my feet. I saw him seize the native by the right shoulder.

"Well, old man, what are you working at?" I'm making a bow and arrow for my son Thomas.

Half an hour later. "Confound your young hide! If I catch you, I'll break your back."
