They Wanted the Baby.

A few days ago the Toronto News advertised "a blue-eyed baby girl" for adoption. Next day two tots called with the crumpled clipping saying: "Please, sir, we want the baby." They could not with their united strength have carried the baby. They were pretty little girls, and their big eyes looked out from rosy faces, under white, curly caps, and over fur collars.

They repeated their demands for the baby, and showed the clipping as a warrant. The young man made endeavors to explain that the baby wasn't a resident of the office, but the little ones had come for that infant and were bound to have it. Tears welled up in their eyes and they would not be comforted till a young lady clerk soothed their hearts. She persuaded them to go home and ask their mother to write and they went away smiling and happy.

BUILD A CHAPEL ON IT.

A PROPOSAL REGARDING THE OLD BURIAL GROUNDS.

There is Opposition to the City Taking it Over and Converting it Into a Park.—A Committee Will Confer With the Ministerial Association.

The proposal to transfer the burial grounds at the head of Clergy street to the city, to be used as a park, has created opposition. Many persons did not favor such a change and a meeting of those interested was held in D. Fraser's hall yesterday, Edw. J. B. Pense was chosen chairman. He stated that the holding of a meeting of those interested in the burying ground to consider what was best to be done with the property was conceived by Mr. Rogers and he had ample justification for his movements. As one of those having a relative buried in the property, the speaker felt that the present state of the grounds was a disgrace to the city. The Church of England, to which the speaker belonged, was one of the great defaulters in the matter of keeping the grounds in repair. St. George's parish had for many years received large endowments which were to be applied for the good of the parish, and one of the duties of that congregation was to protect the burying ground. The present state of the property cannot be allowed to continue. Citizens report that bad scenes frequently occur in the graveyard, and some steps must be taken to improve it. The property must remain a burying ground so long as anyone having relatives buried there protests against change, and it will be difficult to convert it into a park. One lady having relatives buried said she would protest against the lot being turned into a park. He would like to see a mortuary chapel erected on the property at a cost, say, of $6,000. The people had for many years to carry the dead to Cataraqui, and he had heard it said that this trip was the cause of the death of many people, who were subjected to bad weather. If they had a mortuary chapel on this ground they could leave bodies in it twenty-four hours, except in extreme weather when the time could be extended to forty-eight hours before removing them to the cemetery. He would suggest the prohibition of temporary reception of bodies when deaths had been caused by infectious diseases. Funeral processions could march to the chapel, where the committal service could be held and thence to by about 200 people. This would be the means of preventing the expense of carriages, and to provide for the maintenance of the chapel a fee of $6 fairly could be charged. The bodies could be left in the building surrounded by flowers. It was revolting to carry away as last memory a view of the vault at Cataraqui cemetery. One hundred interments in a year at $6 per funeral each would meet the cost of a caretaker of the chapel. If the city took over the lot for park purposes it would be poorly taken care of, if more attention was not paid to it than is to the other parks. He intimated that if the grave yard was given over to the ministerial association, all religious bodies would be interested and he was sure the Church of England would take a deep interest in having the property taken care of. It was for the m to say whether the lot should be turned into a park or that a mortuary chapel should be erected upon it.

Mr. Rogers—"Is the event of a chapel being erected upon the ground would the caretaker have the use of the whole of the burying ground?"

Mr. Pense—"I would suggest that the caretaker only be allowed a part of the property at the back of the burying ground for a conservatory. He could cultivate flowers to be used in the chapel, and would have sufficient to sell for which he could derive a good income. The authorities should not allow him to use the whole of the ground."

Mr. R. Spencer—"I have known gravestones to be carried away from the yard."

Mr. Rogers—"Some of the stones were taken to stop a hole in the fence, and other slabs were taken away for the purpose of cooling bread on in bakeries."

Mr. Spencer—"If a chapel is built would the caretaker have to look after the graves and fences?"

Mr. Pense—"The caretaker would have all of that to do. I think we should send a deputation to the ministerial association to discuss the matter of improving the grounds."

Mr. Rogers—"I think we should start a subscription for a chapel at once."

Mr. Pense—"You have got to lay your plans before asking for money."

John McMahon—"Would you recommend that all funeral services be held in the chapel?" A great many people desire to hold funeral services in their homes."

Mr Pense—"Only the committal services need be held at the chapel if service at church or house was desired."

Mr. McMahon—"Would the bodies remain in the vault all night?"

Mr. Pense—"The bodies could remain in the chapel all night and be taken to the cemetery in the morning. This practice could be carried on from October to May. The chapel would not be in demand in summer, of course, but would be useful in cases of bodies arriving from a distance."

Mr. McMahon—"The present state of the old burying ground is a disgrace to the city and something should be done to remedy the evil. If something cannot be done to keep the property as a respectable burying ground I would suggest that the next thing that could be done would be for the corporation to beautify it."

J. M. Machar—"I knew that the great majority of a denomination, of which I am a member, would offer no objection to holding service in the chapel instead of in their houses. Under the present condition of things, when a funeral occurs, only a limited number of people can be admitted to the house of the deceased and a large number of people are obliged to remain on the streets sometimes for over an hour to wait for the funeral to start. There was hardly a funeral that did not cause the seeds of many more deaths in consequence of exposure to severe weather. I think that anything that would put an end to such an undesirable state of things as the holding of funeral services in the house, should be adopted. I believe that if the ministers, who conducted funeral services in the house, knew of the inconvenience and injury caused by such a procedure, they would be inclined to a change. This has always been a delicate matter to talk about personally, and they should generally protest against the system, and I think it would be a good idea to enlist the interest of the ministers in a change."

Mr. Carroll—"I have an interest in the burying ground. I have four children and a brother buried there, and I don't like the idea of having it turned into a park. If the scheme, suggested by the chairman, could be carried out, I would do all I could to help it along. If all the Protestant congregations joined together they could put the grounds in a proper shape. The grounds are a disgrace the way they are."

Chairman—"If $5 or $6 per year for each interment was not sufficient to pay the expenses the ministerial association could hold an annual memorial service, at which enough money would be subscribed to cover expenses. I am satisfied there are some people interested in the property who would build the chapel as a memorial to a departed friend."

Mr. Spencer—"I understand it is the object of the council to make a park or resting place out of the grounds."

Chairman—"When people would go to rest in these grounds you could not tell where the rest would end. It might be made a picnic ground if a permanent caretaker was not appointed. Possibly it would be well to ask the city council what it intends to do."

Mr. Machar, in answer to a query, said—"If any relative of those buried in the grounds protest it cannot be converted into a park."

Mr. Rogers—"Rather than see the ground in the condition it is I would build the chapel if I got plenty of time."

Mr. Callaghan—"It is forty years since Cataraqui cemetery was opened and since that time the old burying ground in the city has been going from bad to worse. I have relations buried there and when I was a boy I used to visit their graves. The stones were removed and I could not locate the graves. I would rather see the ground a park than see it in its present disgraceful state. The monument of Rev. Mr. Barclay was torn down, the iron around the grave was torn away and sold to pawnbrokers. One story is afloat that a slab from the grave yard was seen in a bakery, that the baker used the wrong side, and that people got bread with the words "Sacred to the memory" on the loaves. To make these grounds attractive they could get grants from the council and from the imperial government for there were many brave soldiers and sailors buried there. I am sure there are plenty of monied men who would subscribe liberally towards the erection of a chapel. Services could be conducted in it by ministers of all denominations, Roman Catholics included."

Chairman—"If the corporation would sign a trust deed for ten years and promise to keep the grounds in repair I would not object to the city taking over the grounds, but I know the council begrudges anything towards the maintenance of parks. I would sooner accept some scheme for the improvement of the property, to be carried out by the churches."

Mr. Rogers—"Would the chapel be non-sectarian?"

Chairman—"Certainly."

G. Holder—"I don't think there is a church in the city that would refuse to take up a collection for the chapel if one were built to the old burying ground."

Mr. Callaghan—"I would like to see church services held in the chapel."

Chairman—"Avoid that work if you can. I think we have too much church accommodation."

Mr. McMahon—"There are six or seven churches within a short distance from the burying grounds."

Mr. Callaghan—"The adornments are great in these churches for the poor people."

A. Chown—"I don't fall in with the idea to erect a mortuary chapel, because it would be a great expense for the people to bring their dead to it."

Mr. Patterson—"I am interested in the old burying ground. I have a father, brother and three sisters buried there. Unfortunately I cannot remove them. I object to the grounds being changed to a public park. It is a disgrace for the churches entrusted to have neglected the property."

D. Gibson—"The present state of the burying ground is bad. I tried to find Commissariat Brown's grave for a friend and failed. Not a vestige of the headstone was left."

Mr. Pense—"If a chapel is built memorial tiles, similar to those in the U. E. Loyalist church in Adolphustown could be put in the walls."

The following committee was appointed to confer with the ministerial association on the matter: Messrs. Pense, Carrol, Chown, Machar, Patterson, Gibson, Machar and Callaghan.

CITY AND VICINITY.

Death of Martin Kelly.

This morning Martin Kelly died at the residence of T. Lovitt, Ontario street, from the effects of consumption. He was well known, having been a diver for a great many years, and was highly respected. He was a member of St. Patrick's society.

Will be Sentenced Thursday.

A young man accused of the larceny of a pair of pants from Peter Bradley was convicted and will be sentenced on Thursday. The youth took the garment and sold it at a second hand store for sixty cents. The magistrate has several other indictments against the thief.

The Work Completed.

The new compound engine of the steamer Corsican is now thoroughly completed, and to-day steam was raised for the purpose of tightening all the joints and connections preparatory to a test of the efficiency of the work accomplished. Owing to the freezing up of the lake the trial of the engines will be conducted at the dock.

The Hotel Arrivals.

Arrivals at the British American Hotel—Jay A. Burns, J. H. Taylor, Geo. H. Berg, L. W. Lebille, Henry Shaw, R. Johnston, J. Misell, T. J. Anderson, J. Bernstein, jr., Montreal; B. L. Trotter, James Trotter, Brandon; J. W. Callahan, S. R. Gundy, W. C. Thomson, F. F. Stuart, jr., W. J. Taylor, Bonne Strauss, W. M. Rutherford, Toronto; A. Davidson, Findlay, O.; J. M. Lyons, Chicago.

He Forgot His Own Name.

George Allen, who informed the Whig that he applied at the M. T. Co.'s dock for a job and was offered 75c a day, now states that it was another man who asked for a job with the aforesaid result. Allen distinctly said to the reporter that it was himself who applied, and that the ship carpenter, who was offered $1 a day, went with him. Allen is now sorry he spoke. He also made the same statement elsewhere.

They Were Very Angry.

In the council chamber, yesterday, after the council adjourned, an alderman from one of the outlying wards and a contractor had a very enthusiastic discussion. The alderman made light of the contractor's ability to do work, and he, in return, called the alderman a liar and a ram-coat. Had not the aldermen thought it wise to leave there might have been a struggle for supremacy. Both were fighting mad.

A Narrow Escape.

A young man had a very narrow escape from being severely injured on the market square, yesterday afternoon. A spirited horse, belonging to John McKay, hide merchant, was drinking at the fountain when it became suddenly frightened at something and made a dash for liberty. The driver, standing by the animal's side, held on to the reins, with the result that he was thrown heavily to the ground and dragged several yards, when a pedestrian, seeing the condition of things, ran out and caught the beast by the head. At one time it was feared that the man would be trampled to death by the infuriated beast.

Joseph Not Easily Lost.

On Jan. 2nd a letter addressed to the mayor of Phoenix, Arizona, from J. T. Greenwood, appeared in the Phoenix Republican making anxious enquiry as to Joseph F. Greenwood, of Kingston, a nephew of the writer. The uncle went into minute details as to his nephew whom he had last heard from at Denver, Col., and en route to Phoenix with a young man, whom he had met at the station, who intended buying land. The writer suspected foul play on the part of several persons who were advisers of his nephew. He urged the city authorities to make haste in investigating the case. But Joseph, the nephew, was a traveller and he couldn't be lost. On the slip of paper sent home giving the letter, the Kingstonian wrote, "Uncle received a letter from me just after sending the enclosed. My letter had been twelve days in reaching him."

A Pleasant Time.

The ladies of the W.C.A., who have so perseveringly and under great difficulties, carried on sewing classes for poor children at their rooms, on Clarence street, gave the children a very nice treat, last evening, at the Sydenham street Methodist school room, the use of which was obtained by Mrs. R. Chown, the president, through the kindness of Dr. Griffith. After a bountiful tea, heartily enjoyed by over 100 children and many of their mothers, short addresses were given by Rev. Dr. Griffith, Rev. Mr. McCormick and A. Shaw, interspersed with hymns and followed by a magic lantern entertainment, kindly conducted by W. Shea, to the great delight of the little ones, who, on leaving, were each presented with a pretty box of candy by the "King's Daughters." Special thanks are due to the speakers, Mr. Shea and to the Sydenham street Sunday school teachers for their welcome contributions.

THE DICTATOR AT WORK.

THE CONFERENCE OF ALDERMEN SEVERELY IGNORED.

A Document in Red and Black, Produced For Adoption—Advantage Taken of a Sick Man—Will the Conservatives Exchange Committees—Who's Sat On?

The deadlock in the city council is not yet an actual occurrence. The two parties have not yet had a meeting where arms will be clashed. Yesterday an advantage was taken of the liberals, because of one of their number being sick, and as a result the council could not proceed to discuss the formation of the committees for lack of a quorum.

As everyone knows the election resulted in the return of an equal number of members of conservative and liberal leanings, and the hope was indulged that something would be done to avert the unpleasant experience of last year. To that end a conference was suggested and six aldermen, who had been in the council last year, met, without prejudice, of course, to arrange the committees amicably. As a result of their meeting, on Friday, they were agreed except upon one point, and to discuss and decide it an adjournment was made until Monday morning. At the second meeting of the conference nothing was done, for the reason that the conservative members were unwilling to talk or act. Why, it did not appear until at a later hour a list of committees was produced which differed materially from that agreed upon in conference. It did look as if some strong mind had undertaken to force a settlement upon a new basis and without regard to the eternal fitness of things. There was no hope of the programme being amended in the slightest, and so the dissidents retired, the only course they could follow. That the liberals were really eager and willing for an amicable arrangement has been vindicated by their action. They went to the council chamber in the expectation that the conference would be able to report a harmonious arrangement, and they trusted so far as to make no cast of the committees. They were satisfied that a fair division of honors being conceded they could fill up the committees in a very few minutes. The friends on the other side went to the meeting with a list to suit themselves, and they had as much confidence in their ability to carry it that they asked the four, favorable to the striking of it, to sign the paper so that it might be presented to the council as a majority report. This may be considered good tactics by some, but it is not indicative of an honest desire for a peaceful settlement of the case. The conference should have been allowed to do the work it had, in a measure, and almost to a finish, done so well, and a return to this conference is the only apparent way out of the difficulty. It may not be so good a way of developing one man's power, but it is a safe expedient in what may be termed a critical period in our municipal history.

To-day the lack of generosity on the part of the conservatives was much discussed. It is generally asked why the conference arrangements were not acceptable. It is candidly asserted that the list of committees were not suggested by the seven aldermen sent out to do this work, but the document lavishly embellished in red and black ink, was handed in as the ultimatum. Then the four conservatives signed it, and the three liberals retired.

Yesterday while in committee Ald. Hardy declined to sign the report saying he was anxious to do the fair thing, he was willing to have peace, but peace with honor. He then proceeded to show how unfair was the present arrangements of committees compared with the proposals of Friday last. Ald. Gaskin said when they had a good thing they should have closed, but Ald. Hardy said that the six men had met, discussed matters, had made much progress and were to lay their work before their friends and meet on Monday when final agreements would be reached. "But," said he, "when we came here at 9 o'clock, this morning, your men say their friends have changed the committees and are not prepared to deal. We came here in good faith, with no programme in our pockets, prepared to finally settle the deal and are thus treated. These are not the evidences to go to prove that you want to act fairly and honorably."

Ald. Polson, yesterday, offered to trade waterworks for streets but Ald. Gaskin declined. Does this look as if fairness characterized the conservatives?

"I am not in favor of a dead lock" said an alderman at the council board, yesterday, but immediately afterwards he signs his name in a fine Italian hand, to a document which could not fail but to produce a collision.

If the conservative aldermen want to act fairly will they give the liberals what they have appropriated and accept the liberal list? The streets committee has been under conservative domination for years. Is it, forever, to be wedded to that party? It should be under liberal control this year.

According to the committee composition Ald. Drennan seems to have been unmercifully sat upon. Why?

The News says five committees go to the conservatives and six to the liberals. The paper proves the falsity of the contention for it prints nine committees controlled by conservatives and seven by liberals.

VISITING THE MALT HOUSE.

It is in Fine Working Shape—Malt Being Turned Out.

A reporter paid Clark & Co.'s malt works a visit, yesterday afternoon, and found the industry in full swing. Since leasing the building the company has found it necessary to almost entirely remodel the interior of the works, such a change being indispensable in the carrying on of the malting business. Although the large and principal building is in full working order still the carpenters are busily engaged converting and repairing portions of the old distillery. The first batch of malt was turned out about the first of the month. To one unacquainted with the interior of such a building it is indeed a novel experience to make a tour of observation. The different processes the grain undergoes before it is finally converted into malt is singularly mystifying. In one apartment is found men busily engaged in shovelling the barley to and fro for the purpose of thoroughly drying it while in another it is being systematically cleansed before going through the final process. In one room called the "steeping house" are arranged six tremendous vats with a capacity of 500 bushels each, a large water tank being conveniently arranged for supplying these reservoirs with water. The industry turns out about 350 bushels of malt per day, and, at present, having thirty-two men engaged in the work. The carpenters are still at work on the large building to the west which is expected to be ready some time next week. When this department is completed a much larger force of men will be employed. On account of the dilapidated condition of the building, in some sections, the expense of repairs has been great, but the management seem determined in establishing a first-class industry in Kingston, and if one is to judge from the success so far met with, their desire will be gratified.

Installation of Officers, Prescott.

The members of Amity lodge, No. 80, I.O.O.F., Prescott, held their meeting for the installation of officers on Jan. 14th. The meeting was largely attended by members and visitors from Brockville, Ogdensburg and other places. Fred Davey, D.D.G.M., took charge in company with six past grands from Brockville. The work was done in ancient form and the officers declared duly, truly and well installed.

After the officers were instructed Rev. G. S. White gave an address on "True Oddfellowship," leading the brethren into new fields of thought, both pleasing and instructive. Some of the visiting brethren also spoke in reply to a vote of thanks moved by Rev. Bro. White. The lodge was closed, tables spread and one of the best suppers ever given by old Amity enjoyed. Amity lodge, No. 80, is very strong, numbering nearly 200, and is constantly growing. It is well equipped for work.
