THE ROYAL FUNERAL.

BURIAL OF THE DUKE OF CLARENCE YESTERDAY.

Wales and Fife Chief Mourners—An Imposing Spectacle With Thousands of Mourners—Short Service in Church—Sandringham Tenants Pall-Bearers.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—The body of the Duke of Clarence and Avondale was removed from the parish church at Sandringham yesterday. The weather was fine and cold.

At 9.30 o'clock a detachment of artillery with a draped carriage drew up at the church gates. The gamekeepers and laborers employed on the Prince of Wales' estate, nearly all the villagers residing at Sandringham, with all of whom the dead Duke had been a favorite, stood grouped about the gates. The road around Sandringham Hall to the church was lined with school children.

At 10.15 the bell on the church began tolling, and as the solemn knell rang out upon the wintry air the Prince of Wales and his household, accompanied by his sister Victoria, who had nursed the Duke until his death, entered the church. The carriages in which this party had ridden were followed by three others conveying royal personages.

The Service at Sandringham.

When all had entered the church and taken seats set apart for them, the funeral services were commenced. These were brief, and upon their conclusion the coffin was lifted upon the shoulders of a number of the royal employes and borne from the church. It was placed upon the gun carriage, which was drawn by six horses, and a procession was then formed. The tenantry on the estate of the Prince of Wales and the members of his household acted as pall-bearers.

Following directly behind the coffin came the Prince of Wales and the Duke of Fife on foot. Then came the clergy and afterwards the gamekeepers marching six abreast. Following these, came carriages, with the Princess of Wales and other royal personages. The rear of the procession was brought up by the peasantry. The whole route from the church to the station of the Great Eastern Railway was lined with spectators, who, as the procession passed, joined in the rear. A guard of honor from the Norfolk volunteers met the cortege at the station. The scene was one of great solemnity.

Tokens of Respect.

All the Government and many private buildings in London had their blinds drawn and flags at half mast. A large number of factories, shops, etc., did no business after 12 o'clock. The shops which remained open displayed black shutters and mourning emblems. All the policemen wore mourning and the bus drivers had crape on their whips.

The Weather Cold and Dismal.

At Windsor the weather was cold and dismal. It snowed during the night and the streets were covered with slush. The shops in the town were closed and the shop fronts along the route followed by the funeral procession were draped with black. The route from Windsor Station to the Castle was lined with guards.

Behind the soldiers there was an immense crowd of people, who patiently waited the coming of the body and the royal mourners. Most all of the people comprising the crowd wore mourning to mark their sympathy with the Royal Family.

The Requiem of the Bells.

At noon the bells began tolling their requiem for the dead, and their solemn tones could be heard through the cold air for long distances up and down the river and in the surrounding country.

The railway station presented a beautiful appearance, willing hands having decorated it with a large number of floral wreaths and palms. The trappings of woe were conspicuous by their absence, not a single decoration of black being seen.

In St. George's Chapel, which is located in the lower ward in the western part of the castle, no alteration had been made except the addition of a few dark grey decorations that were chosen by the Princess of Wales.

The railway carriage in which the body was conveyed from Wolverton to Windsor was lined with purple velvet. In it was suspended a large wreath bearing the letters "A.C." in silver.

Not Transhipped at London.

In accordance with the wish that no public or military procession be held in London the railway officials made arrangements to convey the body to Windsor without transhipping it at London. This was done by means of a branch line connecting the Great Eastern and Southwestern Railways in the outskirts of the city, and consequently the people of London were afforded no opportunity, as they at first expected to have been, of showing their respect for the Royal Family and their sympathy in their bereavement by marching in procession behind the body of the Duke.

At Windsor Station.

The Duke of Edinburgh, the Duke of Connaught, Prince Christian, the Duke of Teck with two of his sons and many foreign representatives assembled at Windsor Station and were in waiting when the Royal train arrived.

At 3.30 the train bearing the remains came into the station. On it were the Prince and Princess of Wales.

Another train which followed immediately after the funeral train conveyed the members of the Prince of Wales' household at Sandringham.

The Prince of Wales wore the uniform of colonel of the 10th Hussars and Prince George was attired in his naval uniform.

The Lord Chamberlain received the members of the Royal Family as they alighted from the carriage and they stood talking together until the coffin was removed from the funeral car.

From His Sorrowing Grandmother.

The coffin was taken on the shoulders of men from the 10th Hussars. It was enwrapped in a silken Union Jack and on it was a single splendid wreath which had been sent by the Queen. A silken ribbon was attached to the wreath on which were the words:

"A mark of the tenderest affection and love from your devoted, loving and sorrowing grandmother."

As the detachment of soldiers bearing the coffin walked slowly along the platform a signal was given to a party of the Life Guards on the round tower of the castle and immediately the boom of minute guns could be heard. At the same time the roll of the drum from the massed bands swelled out upon the air and the procession began to move.

The Life Guards had the right of the line and were followed by the bands, which played Chopin's and Beethoven's funeral marches alternately. A detachment of the 10th Hussars and of the Horse Artillery immediately preceded the gun carriage upon which the remains had been placed. On each side of the gun carriage walked guards of officers of the 10th Hussars.

The Duke's Charger.

The charger which had been ridden by the Duke of Clarence saddled and bridled and with the boots of his owner reversed in the stirrups, was led directly after the gun carriage.

The mourners came next. The Prince of Wales, Prince George of Wales and the Duke of Fife led the mourners. Next came the Duke of Connaught, Duke of Edinburgh, Prince Christian, Prince Henry of Battenberg and the Marquis of Lorne. Then followed the Grand Duke Alexis, representing the Czar of Russia; Prince Albert of Schleswig-Holstein, the Crown Prince of Denmark, the Duke of Oporto, brother of the King of Portugal; Prince Frederick Leopold of Prussia, the Duke of Teck between Prince Ernest of Leiningen and Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar.

Then followed the three Princes of Teck, sons of the Duke of Teck; the Duke of Wurtemburg and Prince Philip of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha.

The Princesses drove from the station by a private road to the chapel.

The procession moved slowly, amid the absolute silence of the spectators, many of whom shed tears as the procession passed.

Father and Brother.

The Prince of Wales and Prince George of Wales were the centre of interest. They bore themselves with manly gravity and neither looked to the right nor the left.

All heads were uncovered during the passage of the funeral procession amidst the serried ranks of thousands of mourners. The universal funeral aspect of the scene was heightened by the dreary weather and by the draperies of black on the houses along the route. In the procession the helmets of all the soldiers and the swords of the officers were draped with crepe.

The charger which walked behind the coffin was heavily caparisoned with crepe.

At St. George's Chapel.

It was nearly 4 o'clock, an hour after the time appointed for the services to begin, when the cortege reached St. George's Chapel.

The clergy and the choir were apprised of the coming of the procession, and they slowly marched down the aisle to the door of the chapel and ranged themselves on either side to receive the body of the Duke.

As the Earl of Latham, the Lord Chamberlain, swung back the crimson curtains at the door, the harsh command to the soldiers to halt and the music of the band of the Life Guards could be heard. As the heavily draped gun carriage arrived opposite the door of the chapel the music ceased and perfect silence reigned. Then there was a sharp command and the coffin-bearers from the Hussars stepped from the ranks and quickly lifted their burden to their shoulders. With bared and bowed heads they mounted the steps and passed within the sacred precincts of the chapel.

As the coffin was carried into the chapel the clergymen, headed by the Very Rev. Philip Frank Eliot, domestic chaplain to the Queen, Dean of Windsor and Registrar of the Order of the Garter, and the Right Rev. Randall Thomas Davidson, D.D., Bishop of Rochester, and the choristers preceded it down the main aisle, singing:

"I am the resurrection and the life."

They were followed by three equerries in scarlet uniform, bearing on cushions the coronet of the Duke and other insignia of his rank.

Then came a small detachment from the Hussars, and behind them was the coffin flanked by 10 officers of the Duke's regiment, the 10th Hussars.

Behind them came the Prince of Wales, Prince George of Wales and the Duke of Fife, who were in turn followed by the Royal personages who had walked behind the coffin from the station.

The coffin was placed by its bearers upon a bier before the altar, and the coronet and other insignia were placed upon it. At the same moment the window in the Queen's gallery, situated directly above the altar on the right, opened, and the Princess of Wales and her daughters, Princess Louise, Princess Victoria and Princess Maud and Princess Victoria May of Teck took seats in the gallery.

As the body was placed on the bier the Prince of Wales as chief mourner stood at the head of the coffin, Prince George of Wales stood on one side of it and the Duke of Fife on the other. Standing in a group near them were the other royal personages.

The Hymns Selected By the Queen.

The services were conducted by the Dean of Windsor, assisted by the Bishop of Rochester. A psalm was chanted by the choir and the dean then read the lesson.

The choir sang hymns which had been selected by the Queen.

After the reading of the lessons the Bishop of Rochester read the sentences beginning:

For as much as it hath pleased—

The Duke's tutor, Canon Dalton, stepped forward and cast a handful of earth upon the coffin. After this the choir sang:

I heard a voice from Heaven.

The Bishop of Rochester read the concluding prayer and the religious ceremony was closed by the singing of Sullivan's anthem:

Brother gone before us and the pronouncing of the benediction by the Bishop of Rochester. At the beginning of the service, which lasted for nearly an hour, a chair was brought for the Prince of Wales, who sat down. He looked greatly fatigued and his face gave evidence of his deep sorrow.

Wales Kneels in Prayer.

As the Bishop of Rochester pronounced the benediction the Prince knelt with his head buried in his hands. When the Bishop had finished the Prince remained kneeling for a short time, and a most impressive silence filled the chapel until he arose.

Then in consonance with the ancient custom Sir Albert Woods, C. B., K. C. M. G., F. S. A., Garter King of arms (the Duke was a Knight of the Most Noble Order of the Garter) in the full insignia and habit of his rank stepped forward and proclaimed the full list of titles of the Prince.

The Prince of Wales, followed by the other royal personages, then proceeded by the private way from the chapel to the castle.

The Princess of Wales could be seen looking mournfully from the Queen's gallery upon the coffin of her beloved son for some time after the services were concluded.

Few Women Present.

There were only a few women in the chapel and they were all seated in the nave. All the space in the choir under the banners of the Knights was reserved for the distinguished guests, most all of whom were attired in brilliant uniforms and wore decorations that had been conferred upon them by different rulers.

On the altar there was displayed during the service the beautiful gold communion plate, one of the valuable treasures of the chapel.

No daylight was allowed to enter the chapel, which was illuminated entirely by gold filag numerous wax tapers.

The entire service was marked by a solemn impressiveness that made itself deeply felt by everyone in attendance. Every detail had been most carefully arranged, and there was not a single incident to mar the solemnity of the occasion.

Removed to Memorial Chapel.

During the evening the coffin containing the Duke's remains was removed from St. George's Chapel to Albert Memorial Chapel. Here it was placed between the cenotaph of the late Prince Consort and recumbent figure of the Duke of Albany. The coffin will remain in its present position till Saturday in order that the Queen may be enabled to place a wreath upon it.

After the coffin had been deposited in St. George's Chapel wreaths from the Duchess of Teck and Princess May were placed on it beside the wreath sent by Her Majesty.

Until late in the day floral tributes continued to pour into the castle from every part of the country. Some of them were of such size that it was a difficult task to get them through the doorway of the chapel.

In Westminster Abbey.

Memorial services were held in Westminster Abbey, at which Archdeacon Farrar officiated. An immense assemblage was present at the services, and many persons who were desirous of attending found it impossible to gain admission. Large numbers of men, prominent in public life, statesmen, authors and others, all attired in deep mourning, could be seen scattered here and there among the large congregation.

Services were also held in St. Paul's Cathedral. The Right Hon. and Right Rev. Frederick Temple, D.D., Bishop of London, preached the memorial sermon. There were present at these services 12,000 persons, including Lord Mayor Evans and the sheriffs of London.

The services were most solemn and affecting and many of those present were moved to tears by the eloquent eulogy pronounced by the bishop on the dead prince.

Memorial services were held to-day in all the capitals of Europe.

The Queen, accompanied by Princess Louise, Marchioness of Lorne, attended a special service in the chapel at Osborne House conducted by Canon Duckworth.

The Quebec Commission.

QUEBEC, Jan. 21.—The Royal Commission met at 10.20 yesterday. Mr. Lavoie, local manager of the Banque Jacques Cartier, produced, under protest, a number of checks representing an amount of $11,500, drawn on the bank by Mr. Langlois.

Mr. Philippe Vallieve was next sworn. He had an interview with Mr. Mercier on the subject of supplying the Montreal Court House with the necessary furniture. He subsequently drew a contract with the Government.

Mr. Machien of the Treasury Department produced checks endorsed by J. C. Langelier and Mr. Mercier, also a warrant of $321.40, referring to the Temiscouata Railway, 1889, leaving a balance of $68.

Mr. Joseph Boivin, Assistant Provincial Secretary, was the next witness examined as to a check drawn by him for Mr. Demarais, who was not yet elected a member for St. Hyacinthe.

The commission adjourned until Thursday, the 28th, at 10 a.m., to meet in Montreal.

Chapleau to Visit Florida.

OTTAWA, Jan. 21.—The Government papers announce yesterday that Hon. J. H. Chapleau continues seriously ill and that his physician has ordered him to spend some weeks in Florida. Yesterday evening Premier Abbott found Mr. Chapleau very ill indeed. This announcement has been expected for some time.

FURTHER UNPLEASANTNESS IN THE LAND OF THE DICTATOR.

Prisoners Escape From a Fort, Capture Several Companies and Soldiers and Their Forts and Are only Dislodged After Gunboats are Brought into Play.

RIO JANEIRO, Jan. 21.—Yesterday evening 160 prisoners confined for various offences in Fort Santa Cruz, situated on the east side of the entrance to the harbor of Rio Janeiro and two miles south of the city mutinied and succeeded in overpowering and disarming the guards and soldiers stationed at that place. Armed with weapons taken from their former guards the insurgents, who were all sympathizers with the deposed dictator, De Fonseca, advanced upon Forts Pico and Lage, overcame the soldiers on duty and took possession of the two forts and all munitions of war which they contained.

The Government officials hurried all their available forces to the scene of the uprising. The troops were so placed as to surround, on the land side, the forts held by the rebels, while the Brazilian warships which were in the vicinity were stationed so as to guard the side of the forts which faced on the harbor.

A concentrated attack was then made upon the forts, which were re-captured. The leader of the insurgents blew out his brains when he saw capture inevitable.

OBITUARY.

Death of S. B. Burdett, M.P. For East Hastings, at Belleville.

BELLEVILLE, Jan. 21.—Mr. S. B. Burdett, M.P., died yesterday.

[Samuel Barton Burdett, Q.C., LL.D., was born in Hastings county, Sept. 30, 1845. He was educated at Albert College, where he completed his classical and preliminary law studies and was articled at Michaelmas term, 1862. He began the practice of law at Belleville in 1867. He has since then been known as one of the foremost jurists in Eastern Ontario. The deceased was a member of several Parliaments and had always been a Liberal in politics. For some years Mr. Burdett has suffered from consumption, and his life has been the despair of the doctors for a long time past.]

Dorn, the Master of Music, Dead.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—Heinrich Ludwig Egmont Dorn, the great German composer, is dead, aged 87 years. He was a German by birth and went to Berlin when a young man to study music. At that time Rahel, Heine, Mendelssohn, Klingemann, Marx, Spontini, Devrient, Moscheles and Rossiger were there, and Dorn had ample chance to learn. He was for many years editor of musical papers.

Deaths in the Queen City.

TORONTO, Jan. 21.—Death is busy in the city. Mrs. Maughan, the wife of Assistant Commissioner Maughan, succumbed to a severe attack of la grippe last evening. She was in the 69th year of her age and had looked forward to celebrating her golden wedding next week. The deceased lady, who was most highly esteemed, was granddaughter of Colonel Drummond and niece of Captain George Drummond, who was killed at the storming of Windmill Point in 1837. Mrs. Maughan's death is the more distressing to her family and friends owing to the fact that her husband and daughter remain in a critical condition.

Mr. Henry Pierce Harrison, manager of China Hall, died yesterday at his residence, 150 Indian-road, of typhoid fever. He had been sick for not more than a fortnight, and the tidings of his death came to his business friends most unexpectedly. The deceased was one of the heirs of his late uncle, Mr. Gilbert Harrison, the founder of China Hall, and had carried on the business since the death of his uncle, at the old stand. He was married and leaves a widow and children to mourn his untimely decease.

The deaths are announced suddenly, at Galt, of Mr. James Hogg Daigleish and his wife, Margaret Hogg. Mr. Daigleish hailed from Yarrow, at which historic place in his early days he was personally acquainted with such notables as Hogg, the sweet singer of Ettrick; Laidlaw, Sir Walter Scott and others whose names are world-renowned. He had the honor of joining with Hogg in the famous Poet's Games and was perhaps the last survivor of the mourners who attended the funeral of Sir Walter Scott. Mrs. Daigleish was a niece of the Ettrick Shepherd. Her father, David Hogg, the poet's brother, was flockmaster at Abbotsford, on which estate Mrs. Daigleish was born and brought up. She frequently saw Sir Walter Scott. She witnessed his funeral and saw his daughter Ann leave Abbotsford, all alone and in tears, never to return.

One of the oldest residents in the city died at his late residence at 195 University-street, Robert Yorston came to Muddy York in 1826, and for some years occupied a position in the old Bank of Upper Canada. Being obliged to give up his situation on account of ill-health he went to New York and afterwards re-crossed the Atlantic to his native land. After remaining there for some years he came again to this country in 1851 and took up his residence in St. John's Ward, where he continued to live until his death. For 24 years he filled the position of looker in the Custom House. He was in politics always a staunch Reformer, and voted for the Hincks-Morin government. He was born in 1812 in Rousay (Orkney), and was therefore 80 years of age. The funeral takes place to-day.

HIS WHISKERS MAD.

Restaurant Waiters Kick at a New York Innovation.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—Waiters in restaurants and hotels are up in arms because they have been asked to shave off their mustaches and whiskers. "We are already obliged," said one disgusted waiter, "to give our tips to the head waiter and spend half our wages at the bar to keep on the good side of the proprietor, and now they demand our whiskers. That is too much and we must rebel." A meeting of waiters was held to discuss the matter.

BRITISH AND FOREIGN.

Alleged Confession of Jack the Ripper to a Catholic Priest.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—A royal commission is to investigate the long almost forgotten Whitechapel murders. A correspondent is informed that the owner of a Catholic priest in the east end of London has placed most important revelations in the hands of the police. There can be no doubt that the priest, under the seal of confession, did possess information that might have led to the arrest of the murderer or murderers of the wretched women known as "Jack the Ripper's" victims. That the priest had qualms of conscience regarding the sanctity of confession, even in connection with such atrocities, is evinced by the sealed packet he left behind him addressed to Sir Edwin, Bradford, chief of London's police department. On the package was inscribed, in the dead priest's handwriting: "This is to be opened after my death—my lips must never reveal it."

GRIP'S RAVAGES

The Extent of the Epidemic in England—Statistics of Mortality.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—The returns of the Registrar-General tell a story of the ravages of grip more eloquent than any amount of sensational newspaper description of the epidemic. The statistics cover 32 of the principal towns of the Kingdom, containing a population of 16,183,736. They show that the mortality for the week just passed was 33 per 1000, compared with 28.7 per 1000 during the previous week. The increase in some towns seems incredible. In Brighton the death rate increased from 37.2 to 51.5; in Liverpool, from 36.3 to 42; in London, from 32.8 to 40; in Norwich, from 31 to 40.1; in Portsmouth, from 36 to 57; and in Wolverhampton, from 35 to 48.1. There were 186 fewer births and 1193 more deaths in London than the average. The number of deaths in London due primarily to influenza rose from 95 to 221, besides 63 due secondarily to that cause. The deaths in the metropolis from primary diseases of the respiratory organs rose to 1348. There were only 1.3 hours of bright sunshine registered in London during the week.

Abbas Holds a Reception.

CAIRO, Jan. 21.—The Khedive, Prince Abbas, held a reception at the Abdin palace. There were a great number of visitors, whom Prince Abbas, who wore a black dolman with gold facings, received affably and simply. Every one was struck with the resemblance of the young Khedive to the late Tewfik Pasha. He is small of stature, has regular features and a kind and noble expression.

Fight With Swords.

PARIS, Jan. 21.—M. Dolpech, a Republican, who loaned the cars of M. Castelin, a Boulangist, during the seizure in the Chamber of Deputies yesterday, was instantly challenged. The fight came off with swords this morning. M. Dolpech was wounded in the arm. M. Castelin was not hurt.

Henri Rochefort, the Boulangist leader, in reply to an inquiry telegraphed him by M. Lauer as to whether he should challenge M. Constans, Minister of the Interior, for striking him yesterday, or whether he should resort to prosecution, has telegraphed as follows:

Men of honor do not fight with thieves or pimps; nor do they use them in courts where there is no justice and the magistrates are only valets.

MOULDERS' STRIKE

They Declined to Accept the Terms of the Stove Founders.

HAMILTON, Jan. 21.—The Moulders' Union has decided to take decisive action on the proposition of the foundrymen to reduce wages 10 per cent. on piece work, and 25 cents per day on day work. They have resolved to resist the proposition. This decision was come to last night at a meeting of the union.

The six stove-founding firms interested are the Garney Company, Bowes, Jamieson & Co., Copp Bros., J. Barrow, Stewart & Milne, the Lanthy Manufacturing Company, and the D. Moore Manufacturing Company. When the shops are opened they will be run independent of the union. About 170 moulders are affected.

No Local Option in Norwich.

BLENHEIM, Ont., Jan. 21.—The local option liquor by-law was not voted on in Norwich yesterday, owing to the refusal of the town Councils of being served with an injunction preventing their action on legal flaws in the granting of the by-law. The council will withdraw the vote rather than fight it in court.

Defeated in Blenheim.

BLENHEIM, Ont., Jan. 21.—The local option liquor by-law was voted on yesterday in the town of Blenheim and defeated by 28 majority.

Proposal to Send Soldiers Over the C P R.

MONTREAL, Jan. 21.—It is believed that the War Office in England is contemplating a new departure in utilizing the route of the Canadian Pacific Railway Co. This time it is expected that a trial will be made of the suitability of the route for soldiers, and it is not unlikely that one of the regiments at present on foreign service in Hong Kong or elsewhere will, at the expiration of their term, be returned via Canada.

Belonged to Sydenham.

OWEN SOUND, Jan. 21.—Donald McArthur, the Canadian stabbed to death at Corunne, near the Michigan Sault recently, was a son of Mr. Peter McArthur of the Lake Shore road, near Annan. He was spending the winter on the lumber woods. The body arrived home yesterday.

Killed by a Tree.

EXETER, Ont., Jan. 21.—This morning Fred Penwarden, aged 21 years, son of Thomas Penwarden of Usborne, was killed while felling trees in the woods.

Found Dead.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 21.—Joseph Sharkey of this city, boiler inspector of the C.P.R., was found dead at Moosejaw last night. Heart disease supposed cause.

Selkirk's Oldest Settler.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 21.—Morrison McBeth, one of the oldest of the Selkirk settlers, died last night at Prince Albert, aged 83.
