ANNOUNCEMENT

The Daily British Whig is published every day, except on Sundays, and on public holidays. It is printed and published by J. P. McNeil, at the office of the Daily British Whig, No. 109, Princess Street, Kingston, Ontario.

THE DAILY WHIG. "Opinion our Organ Discerns." STEALING THE SEAT. The Empire outlined the course to be followed in connection with the London election.

STEALING THE SEAT. The Empire outlined the course to be followed in connection with the London election. The vote was cast in the usual manner, and the returning officer declared elected "the candidate having the majority of the whole."

TRADE AND ITS LIMIT. A "Free Trader," of decidedly set opinions, challenges the opinion of the Whig that the United States furnishes the natural market for the surplus products of Canada.

What the Whig most apprehends—hair splitting in regard to the appropriateness or inappropriateness of a figure of speech is of a little moment in the disheartening effects of a little comparison. This is applied by an Ottawa correspondent thus:

White Extra Super All Wool Blankets, Grey, Union and All Wool Blankets, Horse Blankets, away down in price.

CRUMLEY BROS. Cloth Tweeds advertisement with text: 'GLASGOW WAREHOUSE.' and 'Latest American Shades and Patterns.'
