MR. HARDY PUBLICLY DENIES THE Some Important Bills Advanced a Stage in the Ontario Legislature Yesterday-

The New Voters' Lists For the Unorgan-TORONTO, April 6.-The Attorney-Gen eral yesterday afternoon departed from the usual custom in the House, and feet rich to be relieved of the law relating to mortmain and charitable uses rose and spoke at length to explain the changes which he thought were necessary, and for which his bill provided. The bill passed the House without discussion. Mr. Mowat, when his bill respecting the use of totacco by minors came up for third reading, explained that the bill was not to interfere with the sale of tobacco to miners parents. It also passed.

The bill respecting insurance companies by Mr. Giteon (Hamilton) gave rise to consider Mr. Meredith asked if the bill was intended to shut out foreign friendly societies doing business in the province. Mr. Gibson said he had not thought him: self bound to consider their interests. He believed they had no rights in this province,

PRODDED BY THE IRISH The Shamrock Incident Again in Parlie

ment Besult of Coercion. Lonnon, April 6.—In the House of Commons Tuesday Mr. Patrick O'Brien revived the question of the wearing of the shamrock on St. Patrick's Day by Irish soldiers in the British army by asking whether Mr. Stanhope, Secretary of State for War, was aware of the fact that the Northumberland fusiliers, whether they were Irish, Scotch or Welsh, were obliged to wear roses on St. George's Day, Mr. O'Brien also asked whether the government would provide for the wearing of national party emblems or allow all nationalities to wear their respective favors on their national festivals.

Mr. Stanhope replied that the rose had been the badge of the Northumberland Fusiliers since 1675. The wearing of the em-blem had no political significance, and he had no reason to interfere with the custom Mr. O'Brien was not satisfied with the reply of the War Secretary and he intended to continue his badgering upon the first ocension that offers.

The Coercion Act. The Right Hon, Dodgeon B. Madde Conservative), member for Dublin University and Attorney-General for Ireland, said that there are now imprisoned in Ireland under the Coercion Act only five persons and they had been convicted of unlawful assembly. No cases of boycotting existed. This statement was greeted with Conser-

Mr. Thomas Sexton asked, "Isn't that be cause the Coercion Act is a failure and has Mr. Madden replied, "Certainly not."

Mr. William O'Brien asked, "Is there any struggle that was proceeding prior to the passage of the Coercion Act that is not going on as bofore?" [Irish cheers.]
Mr. Madden responded, "I cannot answer that general question, but the figures I quoted show the usefulness of the Act.

CLEVER DETECTIVE WORK

Novel Plan for Overhearing and Over-'ooking Chicago's Boodlers. Several aldermen of the city of Chicago have been indicted for accepting bribes, and the matter from its similarity to the celebrated New York "boodle" cases is attracting national attention. The evidence against the aldermen was very skillfullworked up by Detective John Bonfield whose device for overhearing the consultations of the conspirators is related by the Chicago News as follows: When Alderman Johnny Powers read that certain detectives had been watching "boodling" operations through a hole in the ceiling, he went into the business department of his saloon on Madison street everyone believed they had attempted to and looked carefully at the wall paper overhead. He could not see any hole. After gazing at the wall paper long and plusion was due to an accident at the state earnestly without fluding a break or tat-ter he became convinced of his own innocence and said the story was a lie. Johnny Powers is not a specialist in optical illusions. Detective John Bonfield is.

When the saloon was opened on Madison street by Alderman Powers and Alderman O'Brien it was the understanding that the place was to be the headquarters for the gang." Those who were watching the operations of the crowd soon became convinced that much business was being transacted in the private office of Powers & O'Brien. Detectives made an examination of the premises. The salson, fronting north on Madison street, had a cigar stand and screen near the front door. The bar extended down the east of the room to the shut off by partitions eight feet high were two private rooms, apparently intended for wine closets. The room in front was kept locked. Alderman Powers and Alderman O'Brien each carried a key. Behind these two private rooms was the partition separating the barroom from the "stock exchange" bucket shop in the rear. An offset in the west wall of the barroom narrowed the passage leading to the back room. The private office had a safe in the 'northeast corner and a table in the center. The detectives gained temporary possession of the vacant room over the saloon Election Commissioner Hutchings held the lease. > It was no easy task to make a hole in the ceiling large enough to see what was going on underneath and small enough to escape attention. The new wall paper in the barroom was of a light shade and a black hole, even a half inch in diameter, > would have been at once noticed. Then the laths were cut out for a space about six inches in diameter. The removal of the plastering was a careful operation. A solution of glue and water was used to moisten it, and it was picked out a little at a time. The detectives were expecting to come to the wall paper, but they were surprised to find a layer of boards under the plaster. When a hole was cautiously chiseled through the boards the workers came to a layer of muslin, to which the wall paper had been plastered This was a piece of good fortune. The stiff muslin allowed a 6-inch hole to be cut in etrated were the cloth and paper. Detective Bonfield then decided to prick a large number of very small holes through the muslin and paper. Experiments were made, and it was found that a sheet of paper could be made as porous as mosquite bar without marking it up. It was feared, however, that in trying to put in so many of the little apertures the paper might be torn by the holes "running into each other." So the needles were fastened to gether in a comb and the work was done with the holes very close to each other It was found that the whole interior of the office could be seen and the talk could be plainly heard. In order for the observer to lie down and keep his eye over the sieve, a neat little shelf was inserted between the joists. All of this tedious work was done in the few hours of the night during which the place below was As to what the man on the shelf saw and heard and what was taken down in short hand the grand jury will inquire in good time. After sufficient observation had satisfied the detectives, the hole was closed up and the floor relaid. The reason Alderman Johnny Powers did not find the hole was that there were several hundred holes.

DOES PREMIER ABBOTT INTEND TO RESIGNT

Expected to Be Asked to Be he itered at the Leadership of a Conservative Caucus to Be Held To-morrow - A leads Duy in the House. OTTAWA, April & -A call for she first naucus of the Conservative party has been issued for Thursday morning, when it will not be at all surprising of Mr. Abbott should announce to the caneur his desire to be relieved from the cares and responsibilities of leadership and request the party to decide on his successor, the actual change not to take place until after the session or later. It is well known that Mr. Abbott is not at all auxious to retain the premierablp, but it is not so well known that when he rented a house last December. he only took it for six mouths and not for a year, as was supposed at the time. The course it may be renewed, but the fact of its being only made for six months looks as if Mr. Abbott had contemplated so long ago as last December retiring from the premierahip at the close of the session. It will be a little surprising if something about this is not heard at Thursday's occurs. Yesterday's session of the House was quiet and uneventful. Mr. MyMulleu while the item of $6370 for the Jamalca exhibition was under discussion, pointed out that the Government had paid duty on a lot of whisky which had been distributed free as an advertisement, Mr.

Casey frankly confessed that no better method of attracting people to the Canadian exhibit could have been found clined, declaring that she believed him than a free distribution of whisky. On the vote of $5000 for the Chicago Exposition it was stated that about 100,000 square feet of space had been assigned to Canada, and Hon. Mr. Carling stated that it was not intended to creek a special building, but every effort would be made to have the Canadian exhibit as successful as it had been at the Centennial at Philadelphia. It was also stated that the question of feeding and insuring cattle while on exhibition was being considered and that the freight would be paid by the Government of cattle brought back to Canada. It was also intimated that a larger amount would be asked for in the supple-
