

HOW BABIES SUFFER From Torturing Humors.

When their tender SKINS are literally ON FIRE with ITCHING and BURNING ECZEMAS and other Itching, Scaly, and Blistchy Skin and Scalp Diseases, none but mothers realize.

To know that a single application of the Cuticura Remedies will, in the greater majority of cases, afford instant and complete relief, permit rest and sleep, and point to a permanent and economical (because so speedy) cure, and not to use them without a moment's delay, is to be guilty of positive inhumanity. No greater legacy can be bestowed upon a child than a skin without blemish and a body nourished with pure blood.

CUTICURA

Remedies are the greatest skin cures, blood purifiers, and humor remedies, are absolutely pure, and may be used from nipples to scrofula, from infancy to age, with the most gratifying and unfailing success.

TREATMENT.—CUTICURA, the great skin-care, and CUTICURA SOAP, an exquisite skin purifier and beautifier, most powerfully assuage the most intense itching, burning, scalping of crust and scales, and restore the skin and scalp to health.

CUTICURA REMEDIES are the greatest of humor "remedies," cleanse the blood of all impurities and poisonous elements, and thus removes the cause.

"ALL THE TRUE BLOOMS, SKINS, SCALP, AND HAIR," mailed free to any address 4 pages, postpaid, on obtainable elsewhere.

DRUGS, CUTICURA REMEDIES are sold throughout the world. PALES, CUTICURA SOAP, &c., prepared by PORTER DRUG & CHEMICAL CORP., Boston, U.S.A.

Pimples, Blackheads, and comedones are also removed by these effective of all Skin Pustules and Blemishes, while rivalling in effect and purity the most expensive of soaps and mercury soaps. The only preventive of inflammation and clogging of the pores, the cause of most facial blemishes. Price, 36¢.

THE BRITISH SOLDIER.

IS THE AVERAGE BELOW THAT OF PAST DECADES?

Woodhull and Claffin in Lecture in America—Death of a Famous English Novelist—The Queen, Mother of a Bulgarian Representative at Constantople.

LONDON, April 16.—The revelations made in the "Daily Mail" of the state of the British army given before the committee of enquiry presided over by Lord Wantage have caused the sensation of the week. Recommendations which the committee proposed were a series of dry and formal resolutions, and nothing of the extraordinary statements of leading military chiefs. These were of such a nature as will lead to active agitation in Parliament as soon as recess is over.

A group of Commons have already signed the War Secretary privately and extorted from him promises that the government shall not continue a full-blown and pointed referendum. The generals excluded in the branch will probably be transferred from the Langevin Block to the Eastern Block next week.

The revelations on the transfer of the Geological Department to the control of the Minister of Agriculture, Prof. Selwyn, have been made public, will be superannuated and Dr. H. H. Turner, the author of the "Reservoir," is about 68 years of age and has been over 33 years in the service.

The "Coron" charges, that the authorities could not do more for the men stampeded at Aldershot, were well suited to fit day's service on account of their young and lack of stamina, and that the men practised to put such men to work was two hours carrying the pack or sentry duty.

The Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief, endorsed the startling statement, which goes to the effect that the authorities could not do more for the men stampeded at Aldershot, were well suited to fit day's service on account of their young and lack of stamina, and that the men practised to put such men to work was two hours carrying the pack or sentry duty.

The British Consul at Brussels, in answer to a letter from a gentleman in this city, as to the possibilities of increasing the trade between Canada and that city, says:

"There is only one article of note which is making money in Canada, and that is rice. Canadian rice, however, is not good, and will not sell in Europe.

This is not at all unlikely, as Prof. Selwyn is about 68 years of age and has been over 33 years in the service.

The "Coron" charges, that the authorities could not do more for the men stampeded at Aldershot, were well suited to fit day's service on account of their young and lack of stamina, and that the men practised to put such men to work was two hours carrying the pack or sentry duty.

The Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief, endorsed the startling statement, which goes to the effect that the authorities could not do more for the men stampeded at Aldershot, were well suited to fit day's service on account of their young and lack of stamina, and that the men practised to put such men to work was two hours carrying the pack or sentry duty.

The Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief, endorsed the startling statement, which goes to the effect that the authorities could not do more for the men stampeded at Aldershot, were well suited to fit day's service on account of their young and lack of stamina, and that the men practised to put such men to work was two hours carrying the pack or sentry duty.

The Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief, endorsed the startling statement, which goes to the effect that the authorities could not do more for the men stampeded at Aldershot, were well suited to fit day's service on account of their young and lack of stamina, and that the men practised to put such men to work was two hours carrying the pack or sentry duty.

The Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief, endorsed the startling statement, which goes to the effect that the authorities could not do more for the men stampeded at Aldershot, were well suited to fit day's service on account of their young and lack of stamina, and that the men practised to put such men to work was two hours carrying the pack or sentry duty.

The Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief, endorsed the startling statement, which goes to the effect that the authorities could not do more for the men stampeded at Aldershot, were well suited to fit day's service on account of their young and lack of stamina, and that the men practised to put such men to work was two hours carrying the pack or sentry duty.

The Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief, endorsed the startling statement, which goes to the effect that the authorities could not do more for the men stampeded at Aldershot, were well suited to fit day's service on account of their young and lack of stamina, and that the men practised to put such men to work was two hours carrying the pack or sentry duty.

The Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief, endorsed the startling statement, which goes to the effect that the authorities could not do more for the men stampeded at Aldershot, were well suited to fit day's service on account of their young and lack of stamina, and that the men practised to put such men to work was two hours carrying the pack or sentry duty.

The Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief, endorsed the startling statement, which goes to the effect that the authorities could not do more for the men stampeded at Aldershot, were well suited to fit day's service on account of their young and lack of stamina, and that the men practised to put such men to work was two hours carrying the pack or sentry duty.

The Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief, endorsed the startling statement, which goes to the effect that the authorities could not do more for the men stampeded at Aldershot, were well suited to fit day's service on account of their young and lack of stamina, and that the men practised to put such men to work was two hours carrying the pack or sentry duty.

The Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief, endorsed the startling statement, which goes to the effect that the authorities could not do more for the men stampeded at Aldershot, were well suited to fit day's service on account of their young and lack of stamina, and that the men practised to put such men to work was two hours carrying the pack or sentry duty.

The Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief, endorsed the startling statement, which goes to the effect that the authorities could not do more for the men stampeded at Aldershot, were well suited to fit day's service on account of their young and lack of stamina, and that the men practised to put such men to work was two hours carrying the pack or sentry duty.

The Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief, endorsed the startling statement, which goes to the effect that the authorities could not do more for the men stampeded at Aldershot, were well suited to fit day's service on account of their young and lack of stamina, and that the men practised to put such men to work was two hours carrying the pack or sentry duty.

The Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief, endorsed the startling statement, which goes to the effect that the authorities could not do more for the men stampeded at Aldershot, were well suited to fit day's service on account of their young and lack of stamina, and that the men practised to put such men to work was two hours carrying the pack or sentry duty.

The Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief, endorsed the startling statement, which goes to the effect that the authorities could not do more for the men stampeded at Aldershot, were well suited to fit day's service on account of their young and lack of stamina, and that the men practised to put such men to work was two hours carrying the pack or sentry duty.

The Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief, endorsed the startling statement, which goes to the effect that the authorities could not do more for the men stampeded at Aldershot, were well suited to fit day's service on account of their young and lack of stamina, and that the men practised to put such men to work was two hours carrying the pack or sentry duty.

The Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief, endorsed the startling statement, which goes to the effect that the authorities could not do more for the men stampeded at Aldershot, were well suited to fit day's service on account of their young and lack of stamina, and that the men practised to put such men to work was two hours carrying the pack or sentry duty.

The Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief, endorsed the startling statement, which goes to the effect that the authorities could not do more for the men stampeded at Aldershot, were well suited to fit day's service on account of their young and lack of stamina, and that the men practised to put such men to work was two hours carrying the pack or sentry duty.

The Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief, endorsed the startling statement, which goes to the effect that the authorities could not do more for the men stampeded at Aldershot, were well suited to fit day's service on account of their young and lack of stamina, and that the men practised to put such men to work was two hours carrying the pack or sentry duty.

The Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief, endorsed the startling statement, which goes to the effect that the authorities could not do more for the men stampeded at Aldershot, were well suited to fit day's service on account of their young and lack of stamina, and that the men practised to put such men to work was two hours carrying the pack or sentry duty.

The Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief, endorsed the startling statement, which goes to the effect that the authorities could not do more for the men stampeded at Aldershot, were well suited to fit day's service on account of their young and lack of stamina, and that the men practised to put such men to work was two hours carrying the pack or sentry duty.

The Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief, endorsed the startling statement, which goes to the effect that the authorities could not do more for the men stampeded at Aldershot, were well suited to fit day's service on account of their young and lack of stamina, and that the men practised to put such men to work was two hours carrying the pack or sentry duty.

The Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief, endorsed the startling statement, which goes to the effect that the authorities could not do more for the men stampeded at Aldershot, were well suited to fit day's service on account of their young and lack of stamina, and that the men practised to put such men to work was two hours carrying the pack or sentry duty.

The Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief, endorsed the startling statement, which goes to the effect that the authorities could not do more for the men stampeded at Aldershot, were well suited to fit day's service on account of their young and lack of stamina, and that the men practised to put such men to work was two hours carrying the pack or sentry duty.

The Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief, endorsed the startling statement, which goes to the effect that the authorities could not do more for the men stampeded at Aldershot, were well suited to fit day's service on account of their young and lack of stamina, and that the men practised to put such men to work was two hours carrying the pack or sentry duty.

The Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief, endorsed the startling statement, which goes to the effect that the authorities could not do more for the men stampeded at Aldershot, were well suited to fit day's service on account of their young and lack of stamina, and that the men practised to put such men to work was two hours carrying the pack or sentry duty.

The Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief, endorsed the startling statement, which goes to the effect that the authorities could not do more for the men stampeded at Aldershot, were well suited to fit day's service on account of their young and lack of stamina, and that the men practised to put such men to work was two hours carrying the pack or sentry duty.

The Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief, endorsed the startling statement, which goes to the effect that the authorities could not do more for the men stampeded at Aldershot, were well suited to fit day's service on account of their young and lack of stamina, and that the men practised to put such men to work was two hours carrying the pack or sentry duty.

The Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief, endorsed the startling statement, which goes to the effect that the authorities could not do more for the men stampeded at Aldershot, were well suited to fit day's service on account of their young and lack of stamina, and that the men practised to put such men to work was two hours carrying the pack or sentry duty.

The Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief, endorsed the startling statement, which goes to the effect that the authorities could not do more for the men stampeded at Aldershot, were well suited to fit day's service on account of their young and lack of stamina, and that the men practised to put such men to work was two hours carrying the pack or sentry duty.

The Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief, endorsed the startling statement, which goes to the effect that the authorities could not do more for the men stampeded at Aldershot, were well suited to fit day's service on account of their young and lack of stamina, and that the men practised to put such men to work was two hours carrying the pack or sentry duty.

The Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief, endorsed the startling statement, which goes to the effect that the authorities could not do more for the men stampeded at Aldershot, were well suited to fit day's service on account of their young and lack of stamina, and that the men practised to put such men to work was two hours carrying the pack or sentry duty.

The Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief, endorsed the startling statement, which goes to the effect that the authorities could not do more for the men stampeded at Aldershot, were well suited to fit day's service on account of their young and lack of stamina, and that the men practised to put such men to work was two hours carrying the pack or sentry duty.

The Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief, endorsed the startling statement, which goes to the effect that the authorities could not do more for the men stampeded at Aldershot, were well suited to fit day's service on account of their young and lack of stamina, and that the men practised to put such men to work was two hours carrying the pack or sentry duty.

The Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief, endorsed the startling statement, which goes to the effect that the authorities could not do more for the men stampeded at Aldershot, were well suited to fit day's service on account of their young and lack of stamina, and that the men practised to put such men to work was two hours carrying the pack or sentry duty.

The Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief, endorsed the startling statement, which goes to the effect that the authorities could not do more for the men stampeded at Aldershot, were well suited to fit day's service on account of their young and lack of stamina, and that the men practised to put such men to work was two hours carrying the pack or sentry duty.

The Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief, endorsed the startling statement, which goes to the effect that the authorities could not do more for the men stampeded at Aldershot, were well suited to fit day's service on account of their young and lack of stamina, and that the men practised to put such men to work was two hours carrying the pack or sentry duty.

The Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief, endorsed the startling statement, which goes to the effect that the authorities could not do more for the men stampeded at Aldershot, were well suited to fit day's service on account of their young and lack of stamina, and that the men practised to put such men to work was two hours carrying the pack or sentry duty.

The Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief, endorsed the startling statement, which goes to the effect that the authorities could not do more for the men stampeded at Aldershot, were well suited to fit day's service on account of their young and lack of stamina, and that the men practised to put such men to work was two hours carrying the pack or sentry duty.

The Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief, endorsed the startling statement, which goes to the effect that the authorities could not do more for the men stampeded at Aldershot, were well suited to fit day's service on account of their young and lack of stamina, and that the men practised to put such men to work was two hours carrying the pack or sentry duty.

The Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief, endorsed the startling statement, which goes to the effect that the authorities could not do more for the men stampeded at Aldershot, were well suited to fit day's service on account of their young and lack of stamina, and that the men practised to put such men to work was two hours carrying the pack or sentry duty.

The Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief, endorsed the startling statement, which goes to the effect that the authorities could not do more for the men stampeded at Aldershot, were well suited to fit day's service on account of their young and lack of stamina, and that the men practised to put such men to work was two hours carrying the pack or sentry duty.

The Duke of