If any code can be considered binding in any sense among Americans, as the two men referred to are, it is that compiled by Governor John Lynde Wilson, of South Carolina, in 1845. In the Middle Ages those fights which were supposed to reveal by their issue "the judgment of God" were many of them almost incredibly brutal. One, Jacotin, two peasants, at Valenciennes. They fought with quarter staves, both being thoroughly greased, and using ashes in their hands to keep a grip on their bludgeons. Mahuot threw a handful of sand nto Jacotin's eyes, and got the better of the fight at first. Jacotin, however, presently threw him, jumped on his body, put out his eyes and then knocked out his brains. Jacotin had previously killed a relative of Mahuot, and this fight was to settle the question whether the first killfair fight. As he succeeded in killing the second, Philip of Burgundy decided that the first was a fair fight, and Jacotin was therefore acquitted of all blame. The Irish code of a century ago was not mite as bad as this, but it was sufficiently cruel. Its thirteenth rule, for example, was, "No dumb shooting or firing in the air is admissible in any case. The chal-
