When the mate and fireman of the steamer arrived they missed Hagerty and went in search of him. After some little time they saw his body floating in the dock. They notified the police and officers McCullough and Craig went and pulled the body out. There was a bruise on the nece, showing that Hagerty had fallen against the side of the dock, and one Mrs. Sole and boy left to-day for Dexter, of his hands were cut. The body was floating with arms outstretched. The lantern was fished out with the glass broken. It is supposed the old man was worried about the boat and in his hurry to reach her alipped off. The body was taken to the residence of Mr. Gallagher, a son-in-law. Mr. Hagerty was well-known, having lived in the city many years. He was for a long time an officer in the Kingston penitentiary, and while there was a painstaking and efficient cfficial. On his retirement he started a hotel, doing business on Bagot street. His death makes a double bereavement, for it is only a shorttime since his son, Dennis J., once a detective here, died in Minneapolis. Deceased's wife died about two years ago in Detroit and was brought here for burial. The rest of his family are living in the western states.

was Hagerty's voice they heard. The late D. Hagerty was born in the county of Kerry, parish of Gleatlesk, Ireland, sixty four years ago, and came to this country in 1849. After he came to the city he was employed on a man-of-war ship until 1851, when he retired to accept the appointment of guard in the Kingston penitentiary, which position he held until 1869. In early days he was a great athlete, and could lift heavy weights with ease. He leaves four sons and two daughters.

In the presence of officers and men of the warship Cherokee he once gave an exhibition of his strength and lifted from the ground an anchor weighing over 1,700 lbs. When this feat was announced the public would not credit the atory, and in order to prove applications for primary, junior leaving, the dock yard one afternoon. There were over 1,000 people present and he again lifted the anchor with case. He was assisted in the lift by harness specially made.
