THE CRIMINAL CODE.

In the new criminal code, now under discussion in the commons, a clause has been inserted, declaring it to be an indictable offence "to sell, or to agree to sell, any appointment to, or resignation of, any office, or any consent to any such appointment or resignation, or to receive any reward or profit from the sale thereof, or to purchase or give any reward or profit for the purchase of any such appointment or resignation, or to receive or give any reward or profit for any office, or to negotiate for any such appointment with hope of reward or profit." The clause extends to every office in the gift of the crown, to every officer appointed by the crown, all commissioners, civil, naval and military, and all places or employments in any public department or office; and it provides that, in addition to any other penalty incurred, the offender shall forfeit any right which he may have in the office, and shall be disabled for life from holding it. What a pity it is that such a law was not in force when the bridge appointments were peddled out by Cochrane, of East Northumberland, and when some one, in the name of the queen and her government, undertook to bribe Laprairie into voting tory by promising it a post office to cost $16,000. The iniquity of the last named job becomes apparent by a consideration of the facts. Laprairie was a close constituency, giving in the whole county but fifty-four majority to the member-elect, Mr. Pelletier, including eighty-eight secured in the village (which was therefore his salvation) and to help to solidify the vote the public work was projected. The revenue of the little post office last year was $439 32, and the expenditure $440, showing a loss of 68c. The population of the constituency, too, has fallen away, in the county, from 15,473 in 1871 to 13,674 in 1891, and in the village from 1,340 in 1881 to 1,246 in 1891. The needs of the postal service at that point were not, in consequence, very pressing, but the $16,000 building having been pledged at the election was placed in the estimates by the government and "thumped through" at any hazards and at any cost. A more glaring act of misgovernment has not been brought for some time to the notice of the people. The Empire storms about the waste of time in discussing the outrage, each day's session involving an expenditure of $1,000, but is it supposed that the opposition must not protest against injustice and wrong-doing, however palpable and gross? That is the Empire's argument, if it means anything, but it is not the argument of the conservative press and party. Mr. McLean, the lately elected member for East York, had his introduction to the house on the night in which the policies of the government came off for review, and he must be credited with the following very candid criticism of his party:

"No surer means could be devised for cooling the friendship of this (young men's) wing of the conservative party than by a ruthless use of the conservative majority in parliament. The opposition has undoubted rights there, which are as dear to the people as the right of the government to govern. The right of criticism, more especially of criticism of the estimates, is certainly its chief function, a function whose usefulness cannot be easily over estimated. It is a function towards which even the ministry can well afford to pay its tribute, for the dread of it serves frequently as an argument wherewith to withstand the urgings of importunate followers.

"To the minds of many men this important function was not improperly exercised in scrutinizing the appropriation of $200,000 for terminal grounds in St. John which one of the government's own supporters declared to be worth but $80,000, or in opposing the project for building a $16,000 post office in a $400 a year town.

"It would not be just to hold the conservative party responsible for the acts of a few of its members, but the gentlemen who, on Thursday night, addressed the house with their eloquent boot-heels and aired their views by desk slammings will excuse us for saying that they hurt their own party more than their opponents by their conduct. These members should recollect that it is roundly alleged that the payment of $200,000 for a piece of land is a job and that the erection of a $16,000 post office in a town where the postal income is $400 is a manifest absurdity. The country at large expects a more intelligent answer than may be given by boot-heels.

"The conservative majority in the commons is crushingly powerful. Let it beware that it does not, by a brutal use of its power, awaken that natural feeling of sympathy that is so easily created for the under dog in the fight."

Mr. McLean expresses the sentiments of all reasonably-minded men. As a journalist he can measure public opinion with tolerable accuracy, and he sees that in the action of the government—with its virtual defiance of a law, passed two years ago, that public necessity and the amount of revenue collected should be the moving considerations when grants were made for public buildings—the people are becoming absolutely disgusted. The warnings of the opposition may be ignored, but it is not wise to turn a deaf ear to friendly counsels.

"If anything," says the Empire, "the grit candidate did better (in North Perth) than the country polls, so that the binder twine as an issue is once more a very limp rag." Not so. The election of Mr. Grieve is a constituency that was so long conservative, and his increased majority, means a general repudiation of the government and all its acts, including the handing over of the farmer to the tender mercies of the Yankee binder twine monopoly.

The tory papers in Canada applaud Lord Salisbury's squinting at protection, but the tory papers in England unanimously condemn it, the Times declaring his idea to be "a mere dream" and his speech an act "imperilling the unity of the conservative party and the unionist alliance."

THE PREMIER AT HOME.

A GLIMPSE OF HIS DAILY LIFE AND WORK.

Some Coincidences in the Life of Hon. O. Mowat and Sir John Macdonald—The Little Premier is a Hard Worker—He Has Perfect Self-Control—His Religious Convictions.

Toronto World.

The death of Sir John A. Macdonald, nearly a year ago, recalls to mind the public men who, starting life with him, have achieved a similar success either in the political or professional field. Prominent among these stands the subject of this brief sketch, the Hon. Oliver Mowat, Ontario's premier, who commenced his legal studies in the office of the then rising young lawyer in Kingston—John Alexander Macdonald. He remained there for four years, when he came to Toronto in order to finish his law studies. He returned to Kingston for a few months, however, and finally removed to Toronto shortly after he had reached his majority, where he has lived ever since.

Although Mr. Mowat was, like Goldwin Smith, "cradled in the lap of toryism," and thus came in contact in his early manhood with the man who was destined to be the chieftain of that party for nearly half a century, yet the embryo provincial premier not only never recorded a conservative vote in his life, but ultimately found himself involved in many a constitutional battle with his old time partner. Still another coincidence worthy of mention is the fact that Ontario's "grand old man" has for some years occupied the substantial brick residence at No. 63 St. George street, Toronto, where Sir John lived during his enforced retirement from the government benches during Alex. Mackenzie's term of office.

In this home Mr. Mowat finds much greater convenience than in the house he formerly occupied on Simcoe street. Not only is it better adapted for the bounteous hospitality for which the premier and his talented and estimable wife and family are justly noted, but the spacious rooms permit of a much better arrangement of his library and study.

The latter is his chief workshop where he is surrounded by what is, perhaps, the most extensive and complete private law library in the dominion, containing as it does many a rare old legal work which is not now obtainable, as well as complete sets to date of the English, American, Canadian and other law reports, each having its own department of shelves. This valuable library is the result of a continuous collecting ever since its owner entered the legal ranks.

In another room is a well selected library of miscellaneous works representing, it is needless to say, the best of what literature has to offer. The spacious dining-room, too, is made to hold several additional well-filled book cases. He is very fond of literature of the very best kind and keeps fully abreast of the times in that line, while he reads all the current magazines and reviews, and thus keeps in touch with the progressive thought of the age. He has his reading habits reduced to a science—that of being able, by a well-trained concentration of mind and quickness of eye, to get at the pith and point of an article or book by a rapid glance at its pages, resembling, in this respect, Gladstone.

Mr. Mowat is, above all things, a hard worker in the fullest sense of the term. It is, perhaps, doubtful if one out of a hundred realize what he is called upon to do or what he actually accomplishes during a year. His correspondence is very large, averaging about 500 letters. Every communication he receives he considers demands the courtesy of a reply, either by himself personally, or by his secretary, and every communication, however unimportant it may seem, is placed on file for future reference. So great has been the accumulation of such documents that seven large cases are required to hold those up to date. He is known never to sign an order-in-council or charter until personally satisfied of what the same sets forth.

His physical vigor, even at seventy-two—the result of regular and abstemious habits of life—give him a wonderful capacity for getting through work, nor does this virility seem to have diminished to any appreciable extent within the last ten years. He may be found at his study—a large and pleasant south-east room on the ground floor, at nine in the morning, between which hour and seven in the evening, he proves the truth of the assertion that he is one of the hardest worked men in the province. The forenoon is spent as a rule with his capable private secretary, S. T. Bastedo (who has been the premier's efficient aid for over eleven years.) Here he drafts his legislation which receives at his hands the same degree of attention at all his work does. His eight years experience as an equity judge between 1865 and 1872, coupled with his long legal practice before that time in many of the most important cases that then came before the courts, have combined to develop a keen judicial mind which serves him in good stead as attorney-general. He is especially able to quickly seize the vital points in his work, and to express them in terse, well-chosen English.

From three o'clock in the afternoon is generally devoted to his callers who wait upon him in his dingy quarters at the corner of Simcoe and Wellington streets—the old York house, which, was years ago, one of the centres of Toronto hospitality. Here his suavity of manner, his uniform cheerfulness and his patient hearing of his numerous visitors have done not a little to contribute to the esteem with which he is regarded by friend and opponent who come in contact with him.

Following this feature of his daily routine comes the meeting of the cabinet council in his office, which frequently lasts till the dinner hour of seven arrives. Of course this routine of labor is changed during the session of the legislature, when he performs a prodigious amount of toil, though he is relieved from all committee work by his colleagues.

But the premier has a holiday time too, and a well-earned one it is. An ocean voyage and a few weeks spent in Caithness, not far from John O'Groat's, where his ancestors lived, invariably recuperates him after an arduous session of the legislature. Summer before last he spent in the heart of the White Mountains, where he prepared his generally acceptable lecture on "The Evidences of Christianity" which has since been issued in book form and has had a very wide sale. At other times he seeks rest and recuperation at a sanitarium, or at some seaside or lake side resort where quietness reigns.

I have spoken of the regularity of his habits of life and of their natural results. I might have added that, despite the turmoil of an active political career, during which he has led and conquered in many a hard fought battle, he has maintained an evenness of temper and an equilibrium of mind that denotes perfect self-control, qualities that have also played an important part in his successes.

In religious matters he is, as is well-known, a staunch Presbyterian, and has for years been a faithful member of the St. James' Square church, and his learned pastor, the Rev. S. H. Kellogg, has no more appreciative listener than the attorney-general. He is, however, no narrow sectarian, and has a broadness of view and a wide charity towards those who differ from him on these lines fully in keeping with his catholicity in other respects. He was president of the evangelical alliance for a number of years.

It is, unhappily, rare that a man reaches the three-score and teath mile-stone in life, as Mr. Mowat has done, with the light of the fullest publicity thrown on his work and actions, with opponents ever ready to detect and take advantage of the weak spots in his political armor, it is rare I repeat, that such a man emerges from each succeeding conflict with his high character unstained, his honesty unimpugned or the confidence of his fellow-countrymen unshaken. It is not an exaggeration to say that the premier of Ontario can be thus characterized; nor is it mere hyperbole to conclude that his high-mindedness and lofty purposes, his honesty of intent and his patriotic ideas entitle him to say with Othello, "I have done the state some service."—FRANK YEIGH.

Six Doctors.

Miss C. A. J. Vernon, 8 Homer St., Tor. teth Park, London, Eng., was treated for more than a year, unsuccessfully by six doctors, for intense neuralgic pains in the head. She had been given up as a hopeless invalid. In this extremity she was induced to try St. Jacobs Oil. The pain entirely disappeared before she had used the contents of a bottle. Half the contents of a bottle has cured many.

PRACTICAL POULTRY RAISING.

T. A. Williams, Weston, Ont., Tells Some Very Pointed Facts.

It is an astonishing thing that the farmers of Canada will continue to stand in the way of their own interests by keeping such a miserable class of poultry as is found on the average farm; those who have added thorough-bred fowls to their live stock readily see the advantage of them, but the best stock on earth will not be profitable unless managed with the same business discretion which should characterize all farming operations. Having given an inkling of the possibilities of poultry raising we will now enter upon the practical details of the subject, and in order that all our readers may thoroughly understand us, we shall have to start at the "beginning" and take nothing for granted; those old veteran breeders who probably know more of this subject than the writer and who may get tired of reading through so much elementary detail, can skip that portion of it, but it must appear for the benefit of those of our readers who are mere tyros, anxious to learn anything that may prove of benefit to them. If, at any time, the writer advocates any method or makes any statement that does not coincide with the reader's views, please remember that you are not bound to accept it as authority, and it is given here simply as our opinion, which we must stick to until convinced that we are wrong.

We have frequently been asked which is the best general purpose bird. Now, if we mention any particular breed as being the best, some of our brother breeders might take exception to the statement, as there are several breeds that lay claim to this honor. A doctor who takes the same medicine himself that he prescribes for his patient would, at least, be considered a consistent physician. Similarly, we may say that after years of experimenting with the various pure breeds, in our search for the most practically useful fowl, we long ago decided that for our purpose the Plymouth Rocks were superior to all others; the longer we breed them the better we like them, and we confidently recommend them to all who want a general purpose breed. Plymouth Rocks are good layers, particularly in cold weather, when eggs bring the best price; they are good table fowls, being large and producing a fine quality of meat, are very hardy at all ages; indeed we find them without exception the hardiest of any breed we have ever experimented with; the chicks grow fast and feather early and are fit to kill at any age from eight weeks old. They make the most attractive table poultry of any breed with which we are acquainted, and finally, when well bred, they are a handsome variety.

This combination of good qualities will account for our preference of the Plymouth Rocks, but it is for you to select the breed that you think will suit you the best; a few suggestions may perhaps assist you in making the selection. The income from your fowls is to be derived from eggs and market poultry, therefore it is important that you select a breed that produces an abundance of eggs early in the season, when the weather is cold and most of the hens in the country are doing nothing; you will obtain the best prices of the year for such eggs as you wish to sell and you will be enabled to hatch your chickens early, the pullets being saved for the next winter's laying stock, and the cockerels being placed on the market early before the general supplies of spring chicks appear will bring a good price, and often pay the cost of their own raising and the growing of the pullets to maturity, and perhaps leave a profit besides. In order to obtain the best price for your spring chicks it is of the greatest importance that you select a breed that embodies the popular ideal of what a first-class table fowl should be.

THE EXCITEMENT CONTINUES!

The Good Work is Increasing—Men and Women Find New Life.

The excitement continues in every section of Canada; the good work is going on, and hundreds of people feel happier to-day than they did a week ago. The joyful intelligence that new life, health and strength can be grasped by sufferers is spreading with amazing rapidity, and the weak, nervous, morose, dyspeptic, sleepless, rheumatic and neuralgic are using Paine's Celery Compound in preference to all other remedies.

Men and women who have spent years in agony and suffering are now rejoicing in robust health and strength, and cannot find words sufficiently strong in praise of the agent which has renewed them. We are right in asserting that the people who have been cured are doing more to recommend and advertise Paine's Celery Compound than all the newspaper articles which have appeared from day to day.

We feel that a glorious work is being done in Canada through Paine's Celery Compound—a work that must increase and accomplish magnificent results. We feel proud of what has already been achieved; heavy burdens have been lifted from weak men and women; dark and black despair has been swept away from thousands of homes; and joy, gladness and sunshine have been introduced to make life pleasant and happy. The wonder is that any individual can continue in misery and suffering while such a remedy is so near.

Have you tried it, sick one? Is life worth anything to you? It is in your own power to make your life what it should be. Have you the will? If so, try what one bottle of this heaven-given remedy can do.

The Case Dismissed.

The charges of assault against Larsen and Hansen, sailors on the schr. Teutonia, brought by mate Olsen, were heard by police magistrate Duff on Saturday afternoon. The men were discharged. Olsen told his story and said he had been hit with a hatchet, causing the wounds in his head. Dr. McVety said the wounds were, he thought, not made with a hatchet; they could have been occasioned by a fall. He described the wounds. Dr. Darragh said the wounds could have been made by a blunt hatchet. When Olsen came to his place he was intoxicated. Olsen exclaimed then: "I had a shave that day; you might have smelt the bay rum." Sutherland and Capt. Lawrence gave evidence showing that the mate was the aggressor and had been thrown out of the forecastle for impertinence.

KINGSTON, May 23.—(To the Editor): Although he is a lord he has not forgotten a soldier who went with him to the north-west in 1870. I asked his lordship to do me a favor in transferring a letter and received the following reply: "The Royal Hospital, Dublin, May 11th, 1892: The deputy-adjutant general has to acknowledge the receipt of John Malony's memorial and to acquaint him, in reply, that Gen. Lord Wolseley has transmitted it to the secretary of state for war."—JOHN MALONY.

Another Creditable Canadian.

A late number of the Chatham, England, Observer contains an account of the first annual meeting of the army veterans' association. Lieut.-Col. Ridout, executive officer, read the annual report, containing a brief sketch of the history of the association. Lieut.-Col. Ridout was formerly an officer in the Royal military college of Canada, and was remarkably popular with the cadets. He is one of the successful officers whom Canada has supplied to the British army.

The Persian Lotion.

Whitens the complexion gradually, after a persevering application by cleaning more and more thoroughly the pores of the skin and imparts to the skin that charming rosy color by causing the blood that courses through the thousands of minute vessels, which traverse the human face to be perceived more freely through the pores of the skin owing to their being perfectly clean and free from foreign matter.

THE EXODUS CONTINUES.

AND THE PERSONS GOING ARE LARGELY CONSERVATIVES.

And Shouting Loyalty They Pack Their Trunks and Make for the Detested Land—They Trot Back to Vote to Maintain the Old Policy—No Profit in Farming Now.

BELLEVILLE, May 23.—The exodus continues—from this section, and no doubt it is equally as observable elsewhere. Scarcely a day passes without an announcement that somebody has been booked for the United States. In most such cases the person or persons are young and above the average intelligence. They are convinced that opportunities for winning success in the battle of life are circumscribed in their own country; and being ambitious, with confidence in their ability to cope with the most earnest in the struggle, they seek other and more favorable fields of labor. These expatriated Canadians are not all grits. So far as my observation extends, a considerable majority are, or were, zealous supporters of Messrs. Corby and Northrup in recent elections for the commons. They shouted loud and long for the old policy, the old flag and the old party, and were furious in condemnation of the traitorous grits who sought closer trade relations with the detested Yankees. No sooner are the elections over than many of them pack their trunks and seek a better fortune among the people and under a system of government they so vehemently denounced. I know a gentleman of this stripe who has been earning a good salary in Rochester for several years, but who retains his citizenship and right of franchise here. He is sure to turn up when an election is on hand, and spend several days working for the tory candidate. Then he returns to his comfortable berth in Rochester, seemingly indifferent to his conduct of gross inconsistency. During the last election in East Hastings a dozen or more young tories came from places in the United States to work and vote for Northrup. Their expenses were guaranteed, no doubt, and were paid from a reptile fund, or some other kindred source of tory revenue for election purposes.

A prominent farmer of Prince Edward county recently declared that the average rental of land in that county did not much exceed a dollar an acre. Is that a sign of agricultural or any other kind of prosperity? Prince Edward is one of the best farming constituencies in Ontario, and has a fair reputation for the production of grain and fruit. The fact is, there is no profit in farming, owing mainly to a trade policy that increases the cost of necessary articles of consumption, and seriously restricts marketing facilities. When will our people vote according to conviction and not by blind partisan dictation?

Is this a case of any interest to the medical faculty: A young lady residing near Belleville was taken ill about a year ago with consumption. She was then a few inches above five feet in height. She lived nearly a year, being confined to her bed most of the time. When she died she measured over six feet in height, having grown a foot during her illness. Such cases may be common but I have not previously heard of any.—QUINTE.

Well Done, Twenty Pounds in Two Months.

J. N. McCreary, Peterboro, Ont.: "I feel it my duty to make known to as many as possible the benefit I have received from K.D.C. I have been troubled for many years with dyspepsia of the very worst kind, have tried all kinds of remedies, and some of the best physicians but kept getting worse every year. Armour & Walsh, druggists here, persuaded me to try K.D.C. They presented me with a package, and I got relief at once. I have used nearly two packages and I consider myself completely cured. Have sent several packages to friends with good results. When I started with K.D.C. I could scarcely walk about, was very much run down, but in two months I have gained over 20 lbs of flesh."

Why is HOOD'S Sarsaparilla

Such a great success, and why is it impossible for other Sarsaparillas and blood purifiers to compete with this great medicine? Because

No Other Sarsaparilla or blood purifier gives as much medicine for the money as Hood's Sarsaparilla.

No Other Sarsaparilla has the careful personal supervision of the proprietor in all the details of its preparation, as has Hood's Sarsaparilla.

No Other Sarsaparilla has the merit to secure the confidence of entire communities and hold it year in and year out, as has Hood's Sarsaparilla.

No Other Sarsaparilla can produce from actual cures such wonderful statements of relief given to human suffering as Hood's Sarsaparilla.

No Other Sarsaparilla possesses the Combination, Proportion and Process Peculiar to Hood's Sarsaparilla, and which makes Hood's Sarsaparilla in curative effect Peculiar to Itself.

No Other Sarsaparilla combines economy and strength as does Hood's Sarsaparilla. It is the only preparation of which can truly be said, 100 Doses $1.

No Other Sarsaparilla has effected such remarkable cures as Hood's Sarsaparilla, of Scrofula, Salt Rheum, blood poisoning and all other blood diseases.

No Other Sarsaparilla has equalled Hood's Sarsaparilla in the relief it gives in the severest cases of Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Sick Headache, Biliousness, Heartburn, and other stomach disorders.

F. X. COUSINEAU'S OLD STAND,

DO NOT TAKE UP YOUR CARPETS

—BUT SEND TO—

THE RENOVO CO'Y, NO. 2 YORK STREET

And have them cleaned without removing them.

THE RENOVO PROCESS FOR CLEANING CARPETS WITHOUT REMOVING FROM THE FLOOR is the only method in existence which will remove grease spots, paint, coal dust, soot and stains. Carpets cleaned by this process will remain clean as long as a new carpet. It restores the colors to their original brilliancy and renders carpets absolutely moth proof.
