Shorthand Lessons. By permission of Messrs. Isaac Pitman & Sons. Copyright in Canada. LESSON XIII. PHRASEOGRAPHY. Photographers who daily practice their art in some special line of commerce, science, or art, find that nothing is more common than the repetition of a certain phraseology which it becomes tedious always to write out, yet which could not be safely omitted. Every department of the counting-house, every branch of business, has its own peculiar style of correspondence, or "forms"; thus, the phraseology used by the merchant differs from that used by the lawyer; that of the stockbroker from that of the chemist; that of the banker from that of the engineer; and that of the architect and builder from that of the medical man. At the same time there are many thousands of abbreviating phrases employed in common, and in the sections of "The Reporter" devoted to Phraseography some of these have been given as models under the head of "Miscellaneous Phrases."
