HIT WITH A MISSILE ON THE STREETS OF CHESTER

lie Assailant Was a Woman and Her Weapon a Piece of Hard Gingerbread -The Grand Old Man Beceives Painful, But Not Serious Injuries.

LONDON, June 27 .- While Mr. @ladstom was driving to address a meeting at Chester Saturday, a woman threw a piece of hard gingerbread, which struck Mr. Gladstone on the nose, bruising that member and causing it to bleed slightly. Mr. Gladatone suffered some pain from the injury, and two doctors were summoned, who bathed Mr. Gladstone's nose and relieved him suffici ently to enable him to proceed with his ad-

The oculist in attendance upon Mr. Gladstone states that there is a large abrasion at the corner of the eye, extending to the edge of the pupil. He says that the greatest care will be necessary to prevent serious and permanent injury to the organ. The wound on Mr. Gladstone's nose bled freely. The woman who threw the missile was recognized as the wife of an artisan. She has not yet been arrested, but the police are on her track and expect to soon have

Mr. Gladstone, in describing the as sault, said that the woman threw the hard mass of gingerbroad at him with great violence and with such suddenness that he could make no attempt to ward it off. Mr. Gladstone in his speech said that the pronents of Home Rule had declared that the House of Commons passed a Home Rule bill the House of Lords would reject the measure, and that if they passed another bill of a like nature the dissolution of Parliament would follow. But the people would not be worried o pestered with a dissolution at the will of the House of Lords. The appeals to bigotry. ne said, were much 'more serious. He did out believe that the Catholics of freland would be guilty of the charges which had been made against them. While speaking, Mr. Gladstone frequently held his handkerchief to his injured eye. Mr. Gladatone's injured eye has been bandaged and he will remain in a darkroom for a few days. It stated that the woman who threw the missile at him said she threw it at him for luck. The oculist re-examined the eye this afternoon. He says the injury is progress ing favorably and the pain has greatly de

Election Literature. The aupply of election literature of the very first importance is simply overwhelmng. Most of the leaders on either side of the House of Commons have now published their addresses, and the speeches of the week include at least a dozen from men of the highest political rank, Mr. Balfour, Corrigan's full bruther to Freeland, Cicero, Lord Rosebery, Mr. Chamberlain, the was third. Duke of Devenshire, the Duke of Argyle, Mr. John Morley, Sir William Harcourt, and many more. There has been a great meeting in Dublin in echo of the greater meeting in Bel fast. There has been another in London Yet it is not quite certain that much new light has been thrown on the situation. One point comes out in Lord Roschery's speech on Thursday at Whitechapel not entirely new, but very timely. There have been rumors of dissensions between Lord Rosebory and Mr. Gladstone on foreign policy, and Lord Kimberly's name has been men-tioned as a possible Foreign Minister in the Gladstonian Government instead of Lord Rosebery. The radicals of the party, or some of them, are believed to oppose Lord Rosebery, partly because he has a mind and will of his own, partly because of his opinion about Egypt and of the doubtwhether he be willing to reverse Lord Salisbury's policy and fall down and worahip France. Lord Rosebery's speech is in this view carious and important. He says with that gravity which he can assume when he chooses that Mr. Gladstone has gone rather too far in his condonation of Lord Saliabury's foreign policy. Then be adds with equal gravity that the new Foreign Secretary, whoever he may be, continue Lord Salisbury's present policy, "so far as we know it;" adding with some emphasis, "We intend to try the experiment of having a continuous foreign policy." If Lord Rosebery can persuade the country of shat he will do much for his party.
