Last Night's Festival.

Last evening a very pleasing event occurred in Sydenham street Methodist church and was attended by a large audience. Judge Price presided, and, after a few introductory remarks, called on the programme. The vocalists were: Misses Griffith, L. Folger, R. McCartney and Mabel Bailey; Rockwell brothers, Messrs. Medley and Coward.

Miss Porte, of Picton, was highly appreciated as a reciter. Addresses were given by Rev. C. O. Johnston and Dr. Griffith. Miss Shaw was accompanist. It was intended to give H. Seibert, of New York, an opportunity of relating an account of his trip to Alaska, but as he was not prepared with data the address was postponed. He will address a Kingston audience on this subject at a future time.

Satisfied With the Result.

In speaking with a WHIG reporter Mr. Wilson said that as far as Mr. Rousseau was concerned he was a man of great ingenuity and marked ability in engineering. A great failure with him was that he talked too much. As to the contract he believed it was a job few would have accomplished. Mr Rousseau had no idea whatever of the task he was undertaking or he no doubt would have given it due consideration.

"Are you perfectly satisfied with the result of your visit to Kingston," was asked.

"Yes sir, perfectly. I have accomplished the purpose of my meeting with the committee, and I will now return to Montreal and interview Mr. Kennedy about the matter. He is a friend of mine and I can depend entirely on his advice." He leaves for Montreal to-night.

The New Directory.

Henry Vernon, representing W. H. Irwin & Co., is now delivering the Kingston directory for 1892. It is a fine book, complete in every respect, giving the residences of all in the city, as well as a street directory, that cannot help but please. The issue is a fairly large one, and as the work is now an annual affair the merchants should extend all possible patronage.

Ranks High as an Artist.

Prof. Forshaw Day's department at the R.M.C. is a centre of attraction. The room is decorated with art work, including paintings of landscapes and plans of buildings. This is the work of the free-hand drawing class, of which cadet Rogers, of Peterboro, is the leader. In architectural work he is unusually clever, and the professor says he will make a first-class artist.

A New Mail Service.

The steamer St. Lawrence will carry much mail now up and down the river. M. Ryan, of Redwood, N. Y., has been appointed clerk and will make two trips daily assorting the mail, for the many post offices between Clayton and Alexandria Bay. Now the mails for the various parks and islands will be delivered daily and letters can be sent from one point to another without delay.

Murphy, and have it well stocked with a great variety of goods. The upper flat and rear premises will be used as store rooms, while the front store will be reserved for the audience. Seats will be provided for ladies. Sales will be held by auction continuously. The opening sale commences to-morrow at 2 o'clock.

Married at Sunbury.

A quiet wedding occurred at Sunbury this afternoon when William Simmons, plumber with Elliott Bros., was married to Miss Jennie Toland, daughter of Hugh Toland, farmer. Miss Annie Langwith acted as bridesmaid and Harold Horsey as groomsman. Rev. Mr. Laird performed the ceremony. Among the numerous presents from friends was a valuable silver tankard from his fellow-employees at Elliott Bros. The happy couple take up residence in Kingston. Elliott Bros. also presented Mr. Simmons with a handsome china tea set.

A Kingstonian's Work.

At a vestry meeting of the church of St. John the Divine, Warden, P.Q., a resolution was passed, extending thanks to Rev. R. F. Taylor for zealous and indefatigable labors in connection with the erection of the church. C. W. Curtis paid tribute to Mr. Taylor's executive abilities and gave him credit for having accomplished a grand work in the face of difficulties that would have disheartened most men. Mr. Taylor replied in fitting terms. The new church was formally opened for divine worship on Thursday of last week. The collections amounted to $100. The new church was planned by Rev. Mr. Taylor and is a remarkably pretty structure.

The Doctors Extend Their Time.

The doctors have kindly consented to extend their generous offer of free services for three months to all who call before July 7th. This is done because so many have called and been unable to see them; 823 invalids received treatment during the past twelve days, while 293 were rejected as incurable.

This eminent staff of German and American physicians have had unparalled success in Montreal and New York, having cured thousands of cases of male and female weakness, catarrh, and catarrhal deafness, where others had failed, have opened a permanent office in Kingston at No. 92 Queen street. All who visit them before July 7th, will receive services for three months free. All forms of chronic diseases are treated, but no incurable case accepted. If your malady is hopeless, they will frankly, kindly tell you so. Go promptly if you wish to consult them, as their offices will be crowded during the latter days of free service. Catarrh and catarrhal deafness positively cured by their German treatment.

N.B.—The Kingston office is permanent, but free services end July 7th. The president and first consulting physicians will have personal charge till October, 1892. Office hours: 9 a.m. to 8 p.m.; Sundays, 2 to 4.

THE CLOSING EXERCISES.

AN INTERESTING TIME AT THE ROYAL MILITARY COLLEGE.

The Events of the Afternoon—The Marching Was Good—The Prizes Were Presented by the Bishop of Ontario—The College Must be Maintained.

The scene presented at the R. M. C. college yesterday afternoon was delightful. The elite of Kingston were out in full force and the beautiful green campus strewn with people gave it an animated appearance.

The programme of events opened in the gymnasium. The assault-at-arms, single sticks, was a good exhibition, finishing with a "general melee" which was very exciting; foil vs. foil, B S. M. Dumble and Corpl. Sweney; sword vs. sword, Sergt. Farley and Corpl. Strickland; bayonet vs. bayonet, Corpl. Armstrong and Corpl. Lamb; sword vs. bayonet, C.S.M. Fraser and Cadet DeBury. The combatants in this event were about evenly matched and a good exhibition was given, causing loud cheers. Then exercises on the horizontal and parallel bars and vaulting horse were given by this squad: E.S.M. Dumble, Corpl. Sweenie, Sgt. Rogers, Corpls. Armstrong and Lamb, C.S.M. Fraser, Corpl. Strickland, Sgt. Farley, Sgt. Vercoe, Corpl. Mansell, Cadets Henniker, Beer, Wilkes, Hayter, Brigstock, Muckleston and Cory. The events here closed by a pyramid of cadets on the vaulting horse, which were tumbled through by cadet Muckleston. The cadets then fell in as field artillery and manned four 6 pr. light field guns, and were put through the march past and firing salute by Capt. English, R.A. Next on the programme came the infantry parade, where the cadets were the cynosure of all eyes. They formed on parade, armed with Martini-Henri rifles, and were inspected by Lt.-Col. McGill, staff-adjutant. Headed by "A" battery band, under trumpeter-major T. C. Carey, marched on the campus, taking up a position in line opposite the saluting base, where arms were presented and the band played a flourish. The line was then deployed and moved on the saluting base, when they marched past to the "British Grenadiers" receiving a frequent burst applause as they passed along. Ranks were changed and the march past in quarter column followed by the double were both well executed. They then formed up on their original alignment when they advanced in review order. The cadets then put away their arms and were marched to the gymnasium to take part in the event of the day, the presentation of prizes.

On the platform were Col. Rogers, of the 40th batt., Cobourg, Revs. Cooke, Smith, Harding, Worrell, Judge Price, Col. Campbell, Major Cameron, Capt. Duffus, of the royal artillery, stationed at Halifax and others. His lordship bishop Lewis occupied the patron's chair and, after the commandant had delivered his address (published in yesterday's WHIG), responded to compliments in his usual oratorical and graceful style. He expressed the hope and wish that everything pertaining to the college should be left out of the range of party politics. The institution was established by a government of one kind and has been sustained by the government of another policy. Whatever government was to be in power it should maintain the R. M. C. of Kingston and hold forth encouragement to th se cadets who do not see their way clear to follow the military lines. The cadets should be made to feel that they had a claim on their country. He had visited Europe and other countries and he was proud to admit that he never saw a body of men display the same steadiness as the cadets showed in their afternoon, exercises on the green.

The distribution of prizes then followed the customary uproar on such occasions being kept up during the proceedings. The general read out the names of the successful persons and the bishop, who delivered the prizes, had hardly time to complete his sentences before the enthusiasm of the cadets echoed through the building. The ladies also clapped their hands as the gentlemen cadets saluted his lordship and received their prizes.

The singing of "God Save the Queen" gave the cadets a chance to get into the open air and seize their distinguished brethren, hoist them to their shoulders to be conveyed to their quarters. They again assembled however, and sang "Auld Lang Syne" as the company dispersed. Sergt.-Major Birtles and squad exploded a mine in Navy Bay under a boat containing a "dummy cadet" which flew high in the air and was shattered to pieces. A large poplar tree was blown clean off its stump by electricity. Sergt.-Major Morgans appeared with his new regimental badge, the lion and the untoorn, about six inches in diameter. This is the official Sergt.-Major's badge of the Scots Guards.

THE CLOSING EVENT.

A Fine Gathering in Connection With the Convent's Closing.

The closing exercises of Notre Dame convent attracted a large crowd to St. Vincent academy and the assembly room was packed to the doors, the windows being taken advantage of long before the time of opening. The sisters are to be congratulated because of the perfection of the pupils in the different events of last night. Over 150 children, ranging from seven years of age to probably fifteen summers, were seated on the platform. They were in the bloom of health and vigor and it was a scene not often met. Under the direction of the mother superior, a general favorite, assisted by a genial class of nuns, the pupils performed their parts creditably. The sweet voices of the little vocalists and the accurateness of the reciters pleased everybody, while the selections of the lady pianists made the affair a huge success.

The programme as taken up was: Chorus, "Welcome," Misses Quigley and Brennan, soloists; prologue, Miss J. McDermott; prizes to the little ones and juniors of the intermediate class; duet in which eight pupils took part, entitled "Chanson au Lion"; recitation by Miss Kate Brennan, "The Painter of Seville"; prizes to the seniors of the intermediate class and juniors of first class; "The Reapers", in which a collection of the smaller pupils carried sheaves and circled round the platform as the older girls sang to the music of "The Palms"; prizes to the senior pupils; recitation by Miss Francis Keating, "Ireland's Glories"; music on piano, "Home, Sweet Home"; special prizes; hymn to the Blessed Virgin; address by Miss Bella McKenty; duet, Quidant's Galop. Pianists, Misses Marshall, Cunningham, Mooney, Kelly and Keating.

Bishop Cleary being unable to attend on account of absence from the city, Father Kelly made answer to the flattering address of Miss McKenty. He pointed out in his peculiarly clear style the necessity of education. The soul, mind and body were to be looked after, but by all means the former first. It was a grand thing for the girls to be educated by themselves and it would soon be that the boys would be similarly favored. The sacredness of the sex would be upheld. Nature had placed barriers it was impossible to move.

Both were the reward of merit. Mr. Mavety received his degree of B.A. at Albert college, Belleville, and B.D. at Victoria university. He is a son of Frontenac and is advancing wonderfully in the west.

THE SUCTION PIPE CASE.

Mr. Wilson's Interview With the Water Works Committee.

A special meeting of the water works committee was held this morning to meet Mr. Rousseau and his surety, Mr. Wilson. There were present Mayor McIntyre, Alds. Gaskin, Elliott, Danlop and Wright. Mr. Rousseau, however, was not present at the meeting, and the only reason Mr. Wilson could give for this was that he had missed the train. Mr. Wilson, a very intelligent person, spoke like this: "I am surety for Mr. Rousseau in his contract with the city. I am aware that Mr. Kennedy's report is adverse to Rousseau. I advanced Rousseau all the material necessary in the construction of the pipe, together with several thousand dollars in cash. It is my interest, not only on that ground, but as his surety and having the reputation of the firm to which I belong at stake, to have the work finished. I want to have some satisfactory understanding as to the completion of this pipe. Rousseau should never have undertaken the contract, his tender was too low and the whole job was only a sort of experiment on his part. I would like to have the advice of Mr. Bolger and Mr. Hewitt as to the best means to go about the business. I may find it necessary to take the work out of the hands of Mr. Rousseau. My intention is to make the pipe satisfactory to the city."

The mayor—"Of course we would be glad to give you all the assistance in our power, but as for our officers advising you as to the best method to carry out the report of Mr. Kennedy I don't think we could allow that."

Mr. Wilson—"There would be no responsibility whatever, attached to the advice of your engineer. I am not in a position to know much about it so I would like to have the opinion of gentlemen who are acquainted with such work. I do not wish to place you (the mayor) or your engineers at fault in the matter."

The mayor—"It might be embarrassing to us here if we broke the force of judgment in our favor. We rest entirely on the report of Mr. Kennedy and don't want to do anything prejudicial to that report; I don't think it would be wise for the engineers to assume the responsibility of advising Mr. Rousseau as to what should be done."

Mr. Wilson—"I don't want them to assume any responsibility at all. I merely want to get at the best course for me to pursue in the matter."

The mayor—"I think it would be more satisfactory to rely on the skill of an engineer employed by you."

Mr. Wilson—"You have no objection to these gentlemen granting an opinion. It is asked in an entirely friendly way."

The mayor—"We found Rousseau very intractable. We must consider ourselves working in the interests of the people of Kingston first."

Mr. Wilson—"I don't want to be held responsible for Mr. Rousseau's sins. He is a very hard man to hold in. He has many things in his brain that have no foundation, in fact I am sorry he conducted matters this way. I am placed in the unfortunate position of having to right that which he had made wrong as far as possible."

The mayor said he was in receipt of a letter from Mr. Agnew in which he stated that the committee should not in any way commit itself, nor under any consideration to break the force of the engineer's report.

Ald. Elliott—"It is very unfortunate that our chairman is not present. As members of the committee we well know the chairman has been practically hounded into his position to day. If he were here he would no doubt take some immediate step in the matter. As far as I am concerned I don't believe we have got any jurisdiction in the matter at all. As the mayor says the fact of Mr. Bolger or Mr. Hewitt giving advice would place us in a very embarrassing position. If Mr. Bolger made suggestions and Rousseau acted upon them and they did not turn out satisfactory to the city, Mr. Wilson could turn on us and say those suggestions originated with your engineer."

Mr. Wilson—"I want to do whatever is fair and just to all concerned. If I stand at one corner of the street and Mr. Bolger at another I won't know what to do. I would accept their advice in a friendly way, so as to enable me to come to some conclusion."

The mayor thought Mr. Kennedy's report already defined what was to be done.

Mr. Wilson—"It don't give any information as to how to go about it."

The mayor stated that new material should be introduced.

Mr. Wilson said he had never looked upon himself as being interested in the matter in any way. He had acted as surety for a dozen or more contractors and this was the first time he had been called upon. He had been surety for Mr. Rousseau in his contract with the government for work on the Chaudiere Falls at Ottawa to the extent of $32,000, and Mr. Rousseau had carried it out remarkably well; also several bridges Rousseau built for the Intercolonial railway. This was the first failure he had made. "If I had known of the legal proceedings he had got into I would have exerted myself to prevent it. I saw Mr. Rousseau the other day and told him, 'I have got to take this business out of your hands and you have got to take my advice.' He replied, 'Well, I will consent to that as far as I consider it reasonable.' I told him he had to do as he was told. You see, gentlemen, I am not in a very enviable position."

The mayor—"For the practical steps you have got to rely upon an engineer. Our engineers might put you wrong. I don't think they know anything more than is in Mr. Kennedy's report." He mentioned the fact of Capt. T. Donnelly, inspector of hulls, a very intelligent man, having examined the pipe for Mr. Kennedy, under water.

Mr. Wilson said that he had asked Mr. Rousseau why he was not present at the test and he had told him that he had not been notified.

Mr. Hewitt said that he had and that when he telephoned Mrs. Rousseau replied that her husband was on his way to Kingston.

Mr. Wilson—"I want to start from some standpoint. I will go to Mr. Kennedy and tell him that I rely entirely on his report and that I will start and make the pipe right according to his report."

The mayor thought the first course to pursue would be for Mr. Wilson to secure the services of a competent hydraulic engineer to carry out the specification of the report.

Ald. Gaskin said he differed from the mayor and was in favor of the city engineer and Mr. Hewitt giving all the information in their power as long as it could not be brought against them.

Mr. Wilson said that Mr. Kennedy had studied the matter out and could advise accordingly to it, Ald. Gaskin contended that Mr. Kennedy was in about the same position of the city engineer. He might give information which would be a failure.

Mr. Wilson said he would be only too willing to give the city a letter freeing Mr. Bolger from responsibility. "If you don't want me to interview these gentlemen I won't. All I want is any facts they may be of interest to me. I want to complete the job expeditiously and do it as inexpensively as possible."

The mayor—"We would like to have it as soon as possible."

Mr. Wilson said that he did not come to the committee to beg or ask for sympathy, he would do his part and he wished the city to be lenient with him. Mr. Wilson then took his leave.

Relatives Still Living.

R. Clark, who confronted a flour mill at Kingston Mills in 1792, was a grand father of J. R. Clark, of Gildersleeve's office. Clark gave up two fine farms in New York state, to come to Canada. He was a united empire loyalist, and staunch believer in British connection. At the time he ran the mill Kingston was known as Fort Frontenac. The inhabitants got their flour there.
