The governor had several hundred, yes, thousands, of these people, and he knew not what to do with them. "He heard that there was a man named Capt. Michael Grass in the garrison who had been a prisoner at Fort Frontenac during the time that the French held that atrongheld. He sent for Capt, Grass and asked him what kind of a country that was up there. Capt. Grass told him that the people could live there, and that they would tind it a fire country.
