GARBAGE ON THE STREET.

A complaint was made at the board of health meeting to the effect that some people were casting garbage on the street. This practice is dangerous to health and should not be allowed, but what are the people to do who have not yards and recesses for the refuse of the house? It is a question if the time has not arrived when some system should be adopted for the collection and removal of garbage from beyond the city limits. The establishment of any system, however crude—the visits, even at intervals, of sanitary carts and their loading up with the garbage which cannot safely be burned or buried on the premises—means expense, but who would object to cleanliness in a plan so well developed that the public health can be promoted. As the city grows it must be expected to take on the improvements which other places have tried and with success. To begin with a small circuit could be laid out, traversed by a few carts, making trips down certain streets at certain times and taking away the deposits placed by the public in convenient places. Like the street watering, the system could be extended as circumstances demanded. And in view of the approach of epidemics a general cleaning up and a perfection of sanitary reforms is absolutely necessary. The board of health is a useful body, but its ability can be demonstrated in more work and less talk.

WHO IS DISCRIMINATING?

There is a deal of discussion on the canal tolls question, so much purposeless talk that some people cannot make out what are the points at issue. Now, in one day's reading here are the differences of opinion:

1. The Canadian canals cost $30,000,000, and, by the treaty of Washington, are supposed to be used by the citizens of the United States in terms of equality with the citizens of the United States. So far as the grain is concerned this is the fact. On the cargoes discharged in Montreal the rebate is allowed to Americans as well as Canadians.

2. The Erie canal was to be as free to the Canadians as to the Americans, but it was declared that the Hudson river was not included in the treaty, and the Erie became valueless for commercial purposes to the Canadians.

3. The Yankees have been slippery fellows in a great many respects—in taxing the cans containing the fish from the maritime provinces they showed how they could strain a point for political effect—and they want watching. They are now very war-like, very offensive, very arrogant, but who's afraid?

Such is a Canadian view of it and very independent. There is another aspect of the question, Canadian, but anti-conservative:

1. The United States is going to cut off Canada's bonding privilege and precipitate a commercial war.

2. What about? The collection of canal tolls, which officials of the Canadian government have declared to be insignificant and not affecting shipping to any material extent. Is the rebate on grain not discriminatory? "If the object of the rebate is to attract grain to Montreal what does it matter where or how often such grain is transhipped?"

3. Why not revert to the old policy of collecting tolls from all using the canals. The government's policy should be tolls or no tolls. As the case stands there is discrimination beyond a doubt.

Now note the reasoning of the New York Tribune which reflects more, perhaps, than any American journal the sentiments of the United States government.

1. The American canals are free, are supported by annual appropriations from the federal treasury, while the Canadian canals are supported by tolls collected from vessels passing through them. But by the treaty of Washington toll must be no more from the Americans than the Canadians, "while as a matter of fact Canada has for years been charging ships passing through the lakes between Canadian ports just ten times as much as she charges those that pass from American ports, or from a Canadian to an American port. This discrimination is accomplished by means of a rebate. That is twenty cents a ton is levied on all cargoes, Canadian or American; but when the cargo has passed through, if it goes to a Canadian port to be discharged for export, eighteen cents per ton is refunded to the shipper, so that for every $10,000 exacted from cargoes discharged at Canadian ports $100,000 is exacted from cargoes discharging at American ports.

2. Another act of discrimination is the tariff on coal. Until two years ago a uniform rate of 20c was charged on all coal, whether destined north or south, but now the rate is only 10c on coal coming down. Result—In 1890 of 133,976 tons of coal going north, only eighty passed between Canadian ports, and of the coal coming down 29,781 tons were Canadian and 603 tons American.

3. The Canadian is accused of blind disregard of the treaty obligations, and the Tribune is persuaded that the execution of the law will raise the issue between one government and that of Canada so that it cannot be ignored or escaped.

Finally we have a rare family lecture from the Montreal Gazette, which, in a recent issue, felt called upon to remark:

"We must, however, be prepared to be done by as we do, and it is not at all certain the Americans have gone further as yet in their legislation than to apply to traffic through the Sault canal the same rule Canada applies to traffic through the Welland. All vessels, whether American or British, carrying cargo through the Sault canal to a Canadian port will be required to pay toll, but all vessels, whether American or British, carrying cargo through the Sault to an American port will be exempt from toll. There is equality of treatment in the opinion of congress in the sense the Canadian government has interpreted article 27, and it is not an easy matter to gainsay the contention."

This declaration has been quoted by American journals and spoken of as being inspired by the Canadian government. We don't believe it. The Gazette has been out of touch with the government on this question all along and is now reflecting the views of the ocean steamship men. The situation is certainly embarassing, and our government has to act and with a considerable degree of independence. It cannot recede from its position without excuse and before Harrison's bluff. It is one thing to make demands and another thing to concede them. The politicans and the newspapers cannot settle the differences that have arisen in respect to the provisions of the treaty of Washington. They must go to arbitration where they have been, and to no purpose, simply because an election is on and the president has again taken to wearing his grandfather's hat.

LOBOROUGH LAKE.

A Beautiful Resort For Fishing and Camping—Many Delights.

"Here in the cool grot." The full meaning of these words can be understood only by those whose time is spent in the crowded city, amid the worries and cares of a busy life, for such really enjoy the refreshment, repose and rest which these words suggest. The poet no doubt had in his mind visions of rest and peace, and a change from the monotony of daily care and labor; to such a retreat is necessary for the health of mind and body, and helps to recruit the wasted energies of both, and enables man better to endure the wear and tear of life.

"Oh blessed shades, Oh gentle cool retreat
From all the immoderate heat
In which the frantic world does burn and sweat.

Nor does the happy place only dispense,
Such various pleasures to the sense,
Here health itself does live;
That salt of life which does to all a relish give."

And nature, the wisest architect, has provided for the many wants of men. Her promises are indeed manifold. She has prepared refreshments and comforts in the shape of shady groves, cool retreats and pleasant streams and lakes, and a grot or retreat, and a solitude, and a beautiful lake surrounded with peaceful woods is within easy distance of the people of Kingston and its neighborhood. Loborough Lake, the place referred to, is about nine miles from Kingston by the Sydenham road, and for rest and contemplation, for boating and fishing, and for the pleasures afforded by rural scenery, this spot cannot be surpassed. The lake itself is about twenty miles long and is charming and romantic. The first view of it as you approach it at the south end reminds one of the cozy nooks at the end of some fish pond under an old abbey wall, like that of Bolton abbey in the olden times. There is a quietness and a charm about it which is more easily felt than described. The lake for several miles from the south end is entirely enclosed with roads, the north shore being a steep bank covered with trees down to the water's edge. The appearance it presents is rustic and romantic in the extreme and pleasing to the eye. In this neighborhood ample accommodation is provided by R. Horning for boating, fishing and camping parties. A good supply of boats, including a steam yacht, and fishing tackle is always on hand. The woods near the boathouse have been cleaned up, the grounds levelled and greatly improved. And already parties have taken advantage of this calm retreat for a few weeks camping. A little enterprise would make this place more attractive every year. The steam yacht is the property of J. Brown, of the Stanley house, Kingston, and with pleasant excursions on which he kindly entertains his friends and visitors.

The fishing grounds in the lake are known far and wide. Here the black and Oswego bass, the pike, the perch, the salmon trout are caught, and he who does not, in a few hours, make a good catch must be an indifferent fisherman, and lacking in the enthusiasm necessary to make a good sportsman and in the skill and patience required in this fascinating pastime. "The nad'ding crowd," perhaps, is wanting in these qualities and so despises this gentle art.

But as some one says, "No life, my honest scholar, no life so happy and pleasant as the life of a null governed angler. For when the lawyer is swallowed up with business and the statesman is preventing or contriving plots, then we sit on daisy banks, hear the birds sing, and possess ourselves with as much quietness as these silent, silver streams which we see now glide so quietly by us." Indeed we say of angling as some one said of strawberries, "Doubtless God could have made a better berry, but doubtless God never did," and so, if I might be judge, God did never make a more calm, quiet, innocent recreation than angling.

"Pleasant it was when woods were green,
And winds were soft and low,
To lie amid some sylvan scene
Where the long drooping boughs between,
Shadows dark and sunlight sheen,
Alternate come and go,
Here let me careless and unthoughtful lying
Hear the soft winds above me flying,
With all their wanton boughs dispute,
And the more tuneful birds to both replying,
Nor be myself too mute."

So much for the pleasures of the rod and line. This lake then affords a retreat and a solitude which are so beneficial to health in those days of rush and worry, and we shall leave this lonely scene of wood and lake regretting that the season of enjoyment is so short, and fully intending to avail ourselves of the pleasures afforded by it another year.—VISITOR.

A PIONEER'S DEATH.

Sketch of the Late Mrs. Fraser—Some of Her Early Struggles.

Perth Courier.

On Friday last there died at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. M. R. Dodds, aged ninety-four years, Mrs. James Fraser, for some years before her death the only survivor among the pioneer band who settled the Perth section of Lanark county. The deceased, whose maiden name was Jane Cowie, was born in Corsterphine, Scotland, in 1798, and when seventeen years old came, with her parents, across the Atlantic, arriving at Brockville in 1815. Next year the family made their way to Perth. She and a companion were the first white women who ever crossed the Rideau river. The bridge was simply two logs lashed together with basswood bark, side by side. With most of the other settlers the family settled on farms on the Scotch Line, then simply areas of unbroken forest. The trials and hardships of these early settlers were great, and many succumbed to the privations, but deceased had a strong constitution and comforts and comparative affluence succeeded the hardships of her early life. Mrs. Fraser was married twice. Her first husband was the late Francis Allan, and to them were born eleven children. They were: John Allan, now of Snow Road; Francis Allan and James Allan, merchants, Perth; Robert Allan, Bathurst; William Allan, mill-owner, North Burgess; Alex. Allen, hardware merchant, Smith's Falls; the late Isaac Allan, hardware merchant, Perth; the late Mrs. James (Rev.) Gray, Presbyterian minister, Kingston; Mrs. Calvin Holliday, Perth; the late Mrs. James Holliday, Perth, and Mrs. M. R. Dodds, Perth. By her second marriage she had no children. Mrs. Fraser was a member of the Presbyterian church for over seventy years. The funeral took place on Saturday afternoon, Rev. James Ross conducting the service, and her remains were laid in Elmwood cemetery.

REACHED THEIR PLACE.

THE MISSIONARIES IN A LAND OF GREAT RICHNESS.

Toiling Up the Mighty Rapids of the Yang-Tse — The Cost of Urging the Men on Their Work — An Appalling Night—A Death on the Barge—A Land of Beauty.

CHEN TU, China, April 22nd.—(To the Editor):—The gorges of the Yang-tse river are becoming famous, and will soon day be spoken of in the same breath with the many popular resorts for globe-trotters and tourists. Only the pen of a poet or the brush of a painter could depict the grandeur that meets the eye as bend succeeds bend in the tortuous river. The diary, in its highest moments of ecstacy, could but exclaim, "Oh, what scenery! what beautiful scenery!" Oh, ye rocks and crags! ye mighty cliffs! ye lofty peaks! ye towering boulders! ye mountains! ye dales! ye slopes! ye roaring streams! ye grain fields! ye terraces! ye homes in the dell!—how long! how long are thy inhabitants will be singing the praises of Him who wrought this wondrous beauty!

The progress up the most dangerous rapids was slow. About an eighth of a mile from the foot of the rapids a round stone is firmly planted in the earth. Several crosses are worn into this rock by ropes which are put around it after the manner of a capstan. The ropes are made of bamboo, and are superior to our hemp, in that water strengthens the fibres. By their use an extensive product of China is utilized. Three strong ropes are used in dangerous places. Living around the rapids are hundreds of Chinamen who make a living by pulling up boats. They get four cash (two and two-fifths of a cent) a boat. Considering that it took four hours to pull us up, we not did think them overpaid. As it is customary when heavy boats are pulled up for the owner of the cargo to give a few cash extra, Dr. Hart complied with the custom. When all is ready, the hundred extra men, boys, or women, as the case may be, are harnessed to the rope, the drums begin to beat, and with a shout and a rush the pulling begins.

Wishing to see the men at their work, I visited the scene of the action. The captain, seeing me coming bethought him a scheme. He asked me to go around and encourage the rabble. I innocently went. I found a gang of half naked creatures, pulling and grunting, especially the latter. The appearance of a foreigner was the signal for a mighty yell, and the louder a Chinaman yells the harder he pulls. To encourage them I motioned them on, and joined in with the shouting. The turmoil was terrible. The boat fairly walked up the rapids, and I congratulated myself on performing a good deed. But scarcely had the boat tipped the last rapids before I felt an inkling of what was coming. The foreigner, of course, would amply reward them for their extra effort. Knowing that Dr. Hart had already paid, I felt I had better board the boat and seek my private apartments. It was no use; no place is private to a Chinaman. Soon a knock at the door signified their presence. The captain good-naturedly, informed us that the modest sum of 1,400 cash was asked, that it was customary, etc. Ignorance, in this instance, was bliss. We could not understand the Chinese language, and directed them to Dr. Hart. We afterwards learned that 800 cash was what he paid, and, thinking we might be anxious to show our generosity, thought it a good opportunity to make 600 cash.

Just as the watch indicated seven o'clock, on Thursday morning, March 25th, we entered the rich and fertile province of Se-Chuen. Huge mountains rose on all sides, only opening to permit the swift-flowing river a tortuous passageway. Rushing through the deep gorge that marks the boundary line between Se-Chuen and Hoopeh is a stream whose merry clatter, as it drops from boulder to boulder, or surges beneath confused rocks, fills the hollows and caves with pleasing echoes. The morning mountain air, fresh from fern dells and budding groves, and scented with the deliciousness of blossoming spring, fill's the soul with love and praise to the giver of every good and perfect gift. Withal, there is not perfection. One thought casts a shade upon the whole. Jesus is not known. Songs of praise do not rise to the Father of all mankind for the unspeakable gift of his Son. These hearths have no family altar. Darkness, deepest darkness reigns. The most noble of creation are dumb; nature alone speaks the might and wisdom of our God. To whom is the voice of the Lord saying, "Whom shall I send? and who will go for us?" Who are ready to answer, "Here am I, send me?"

This first beautiful day in Se-Chuen ended with a tinge of sadness. Shortly after anchoring one of the crew was carried ashore, taken to an overhanging rock and left to die. About nine o'clock we visited his cold and dreary resting place. Nothing could be done. The doctors shook their heads and said, "It is too late; he is dying." About all we could learn of his history was that he was an opium smoker—an almost universal vice in China.

Everything seemed to conspire to make the night appalling. Just across the river a mountain fire cast its lurid shadows in the water; below us were the boat crews, unheeding this terrible warning and courting a similar death from their opium pipes; at our feet lay a man in the last agonies of death. We parted, wondering where this poor heathen's soul would be in the morning and who was responsible for his darkness and ignorance. Let every christian ask himself or herself, "To what extent am I responsible?" As they carried this man from the boat the gongs were beaten, firecrackers were exploded, the candles before the idols were lit, and incense burned to keep the evil spirits that might be attracted at the event of this man's death from the boat and its crew.

Sometime between 9 p.m and 6 a.m. the man died. We expected they would tarry long enough to bury the body. Alas! he has no relatives. His bed, with the grave clothes, which they seemed to have ready, were put ashore. Dr. Hart bought a plot of ground; a man and woman were hired to see to his interment; a bowl of rice and a pair of chopsticks were placed upon the beach, to feed the departed spirit; again the gong was beaten, firecrackers were exploded, incense burned, and the dead man left in the hands of strangers.

Se-Chuen is truly a land flowing with milk and honey. The hill sides are covered with the richest verdure. The people appear well disposed and cheerful. No better field, we have been repeatedly told, could be chosen to begin christian work. The people seem more faithful to the religion they have, and this is a far better condition to be in than apathy. Some time may be needed to undermine the deeply-rooted systems of idolatry now existing.

Ere long we hope to see the cross triumphant over every foe. Beautiful cities situated in cool mountainous districts, containing millions of inhabitants, have greeted our eyes every few miles between Ichang and Chung king. This rich field is now open, and has easy access.—GEO. R. HARTWELL.

A Cure for Constipation and Headache.

Dr. Silas Lane, while in the Rocky Mountains, discovered a root that when combined with other herbs, makes an easy and certain cure for constipation. It is in the form of dry roots and leaves, and is known as Lane's Family Medicine. It will cure sick headache. For the blood, liver and kidneys, and for clearing up the complexion it does wonders. Druggist sell it at 50c a package—enough for five weeks.

The rudder of the French ironclad Brennus is eighteen feet high, thirteen feet wide and weighs seventeen tons. In transporting it from the shops where it was made to the shipyard it was necessary to suspend it between two flat cars, as it could not be placed upon a single car in any position, even by this latter arrangement the rudder just clearing the roadbed and the arches of the tunnels through which it was necessary to pass. This great rudder was built with an interior framework of wrought steel, iron angles and plates, and covered with steel plates, extraordinary care being taken to have it perfectly watertight.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Horses and Riders.

Some day an interesting article may be written on horses that have made history. Last month two horses came very near changing the course of events in two empires. On May 27, as Lord Salisbury was driving down St. James street, one of the carriage horses got its leg over the traces and thereby upset the nervous equilibrium of its companion. The two then bolted down the street and could not be stopped until they upset the carriage and made a general spill. Lord Salisbury was lifted out of the overturned vehicle, shaken but uninjured. His hat, however, was smashed. Had it been his head, what a difference it would have made!

In Germany the young emperor's horses have run away with him once more, but this time, beyond rushing over a hedge and across a field—they only afforded the emperor an opportunity for the display of his "customary coolness"—the episode had no result. Had the runaway team broken the emperor's neck what a prospect there would have been before Germany and Europe! The heir to the German throne is a child of ten, who but the other day received his first commission in the German army. There would have been a regency with all its complications.—Review of Reviews.

NEW DISCOVERY by ACCIDENT

In compounding a solution a part was accidently spilled on the hand and on washing afterward it was discovered that the hair was completely removed. We at once put this wonderful preparation on the market and so great has been the demand that we are now introducing it throughout the world under the name of Queen's Anti-Hairine.

IT IS PERFECTLY HARMLESS AND SO SIMPLE ANY CHILD CAN USE IT.

Lay the hair over and apply the mixture for a few minutes, and the hair disappears as if by magic without the slightest pain or injury when applied or ever afterward. It humbles any other preparation ever used for a like purpose. Thousands of LADIES who have been annoyed with hair on their FACE, NECK and ARMS attest its merits.

GENTLEMEN who do not appreciate a beard or hair on their neck, find a priceless boon in Queen's Anti-Hairine which does away with shaving, by rendering its future growth an utter impossibility.

Price of Queen's Anti-Hairine $1. per bottle, sent in safety mailing boxes, postage paid by us (securely sealed from observation). Do not money or stamps by letter with full address written plainly. Correspondence strictly confidential. This advertisement is honest and straight forward in every word it contains. We invite you to deal with us and you will find everything as represented. Cut this out and send to-day. Address QUEEN CHEMICAL CO., 174 Race Street, CINCINNATI, O. You can register your letter at any Post Office to insure its safe delivery. We will pay $1000 for any case of failure or slightest injury to any purchaser. Every bottle guaranteed.

SPECIAL—To ladies who introduce and sell among their friends 50 Bottles of Queen's Anti-Hairine, we will present with a SET FREE, 12 years best silk. Extra Large bottle and samples of silk to select from sent with order. Good Salary or Commission to Agents.

We have tried Queen's Anti-Hairine, and find it does all the above company claim for it.—EDITOR.
