PRACTICAL SERMON ON. THE PROD-IGAL SON.

in is a Mean and Contemptible Thing at Are Never Kept-Prograstination Always

LONDON, Aug. 21.-Dr. Talmage has been preaching during the past week every day. Besides the engagements made in his original programme for the veck he preached in several towns which he had promised to visit earlier, but had been unable to do so owing to so much more time than he expected being taken up by his visit to Russia, whither he went to attend the distribu-tion of The Christian Herald relief cargo. The canceling of these engagements caused acute disappointment to the citizens, and so far as possible Dr. Talmage has yielded to their entreaties to fix a later date. The audiences last week at Leeds, Bradford, Sheffield and Derby were enormous, and at each place the popular ovation in the streets was most enthusiastic. The sermon selected for publication this week is from the text, Luke xv. 18, "I will arise and go

There is nothing like hunger to take the energy out of a man. A hungry man can toil neither with pen nor hand nor foot. There has been an army defeated not so much for lack of ammunition as for lack of bread. It was that fact that took the fire out of this young man of the text. Storm and exposure will wear out any man's life in time, but hunger makes quick work. The most awful cry ever heard on earth is the cry

A traveler tells us that in Asia Minor there are trees which bear fruit looking very much like the long bean of our time. It is called the carab. Once in awhile the people reduced to destitution would eat these carabs, but generally the carabs, the beans spoken of here in the text, were thrown only to the swine, and they crunched them with great avidity. But this young man of my text could not get even them withou stealing them. So one day amid the swine troughs he begins to soliloquize. He says, "These are no clothes for a rich man's son to wear; this is no kind of business for a Jew to be engaged infeeding swine; I'll go home; I'll go home: I will arise and go to my father.

I know there are a great many people who try to throw a fascination, a romance, a halo about sin; but notwithstanding all that Lord Byron and George Sand have said in regard to it, it is mean, -low, contemptible business, and putting food and fodder into the troughs of a herd of iniquities that root and wallow in the soul of man is very poor business for men and women intended to be sons and daughters of the Lord Almighty. And when this young man resolved to go home it was a very wise thing for him to do, and the only question is whether we will follow him.

Satan promises large wages imve will serve him, but he clothes his victim with rags and he pinches them with hunger, and when they start out to do better he sets after them all the bloodhounds of hell. Satan comes to us today and he promises all luxuries, all emoluments if we will only serve him. Liar, down with thee to the pit! "The wages of sin is death." Oh, the young man of the text was wise when he uttered the resolution, "I will arise and go to my father.

SEE YOURSELF AS IN A GLASS. In the time of Queen Mary of England a persecutor came to a Christian woman who had hidden in her house, for the Lord's sake, one of Christ's servants, and the persecutor said, "Where is that hereticy. The Christian woman said, "You open that trunk and you will see the heretic." The persecutor opened the trunk, and on the top of the linen of the trunk he saw a glass. He said, "There is no heretic here." "Ah!" she said, "you look in the glass and you will see the heretic!" As I take up the mirror of God's word to-day, I would that instead of seeing the prodigal of the text we might see ourselves-our want, our wandering, our sin, our lost condition-so that we might be as wise as this young man was and say, " I will arise and go to my father.' The resolution of this text was formed in disgust at his present circumstances. If this young man had been by his employer set to culturing flowers, or training vines over an arbor, or keeping account of the pork market, or overseeing other laborers he would not have thought of going home. If he had had his pockets full of money, if he had been able to say: "I have a thousand dollars now of my own; what's the use of my going back to my father's house? Do rials—Perfect digestion | me on the limits; he would not have go | darkness he said: "Oh Lord! what follows their use. But says some one in the audience, How do you prove that we are in a l ruined condition by sin?" Well, I can prove it in two ways, and you may have your choice. Then Napoleon rose in his stirrups and waving his hand toward the mountains he said, "There shall be no Alpa." That wonderful pass was laid out which has been the wonderment of all the years since—the wonderment of all engineers. And you tell me there are such mountains of sin between your soul and God there is no mercy. Then I see Christ waving his hand toward the mountains, and I hear him say, "I will come over the mountains of thy sin and the hills of thine iniquity." There shall be no Alps.

Again, I notice that this resolution of bodies afterward washed upon the the young man of the text was founded in sorrow at his misbehavior. It was not mere physical plight. It was grief that he had so maltreated his father. It is a sad thing after a father has done everything for a child to have that child

How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is To have a thankless child. SHARESPEARE AND THE BIBLE, That is Shakespeare. "A foolish son is the heaviness of his mother." That is the Bible. Well, my friends, have not some of us been cruel prodigals? Have we not maltreated our Father? And one the kind, and yet how many of us for our He would not go home. At the door of fellows, but some of us perhaps have committed ten thousand times ten thousand wrongs against God and never

I remark still further that this resolution of the text was founded in a feeling of homesickness. I do not know how long this young man, how many months how many years, he had been away from his father's house; but there is something about the reading of my text that makes me think he was homesick. Some of you know what that feeling is: Far away from home sometimes surrounded by everything bright and plea-sant—plenty of friends—you have said, 'I would give the world to be home tonight." Well, this young man was homesick for his father's house. I have no doubt when he thought of his father's house he said, "Now perhaps father

I think she had died of a broken heart at his wanderings, or perhaps he had gone into dissipation from the fact he could not remember a loving and sympathetic mother. A man never gets over having lost his mother. Nothing said about her here, but he is homesick for his father's house. I think this young man of the text said to himself, "Per haps father may be dead." Still he starts to find out. He is homesick. Are there any here to-day homesick for God, homesick for heaven't

A sailor, after having been long on the sea, returned to his father's house, and his mother tried to persuade him not to go away again. She said: "Now, you had better stay at home; don't go away; we don't want you to go. You will have it a great deal better here." But it made him angry. The night before he went away again to sea he heard his mother praying in the next room and that made him more angry. Do you know there were | Agreeable many who came just as near as you are to the kingdom of God and never entered it? I was at East Hampton, Long Island, and I went into the cemetery to look around, and in that cemetery there are twelve graves side by side-the yeare ago, in a ship, went into the breakers at Amagansett, about three miles away. My brother, then preaching at East Hampton, had been at the burial. These men of the crew came very near being saved. Oh, what a solemn day it was-I have been told of it by my brother-when these twelve men lay at the foot of the pulpit and he read over them the funeral service. They came very near shore—within shouting distance of the shore, yet did not arrive on solid land. There are some men who come almost to the shore of God's mercy, but not quite, not quite. THE HOPELESS PRODIGAL I will tell you of two prodigals, the such a Father! So loving, so kind. If one that got back and the other that did not get back. In Richmond there is a saken us, if he had flagellated us, if he very prosperous and beautiful home in had pounded us and turned us out of doors on the commons, it would not have been so wonderful—our treatment of him; but he is a Father so loving, so him; but he is a Father so loving, so He would not so home. The young man of the house ran down and opened the door to see what was the matter. It was midnight. The rest of the family were asleep. There were the wife and children of this prodigal young man. The fact was he had come home and driven

"He said: "Out of this house. Away with these children. I will dash their brains out. Out into the storm!" mother gathered them up and fled. The next morning the brother, a young man who had staid at home, went out to find this prodigal brother and son, and he came where he was and saw the young man wandering up and down in front of the place where he had been staying. and the young man who had kept his integrity said to the older brother: 'Here, what does this mean? What is the matter with you? Why do you act in this way?" The prodigal looked at him and said: "Who am I? Whom do Hellebore, Paris Green and you take me to be?" He said: "You are my brother." No, I am not. I am a brute. Have you seen anything of my wife and children? Are they dead? I drove them out last night in the storm. I am a brute. John, do you think there is any help for me? Do you think I will ever get over this life of dissipation?" He said, "John, there is just one thing that will stop this." The prodigal ran his finger across his throat and said: "That will stop it, and I stop it before night. Oh, my brain; can stand it no longer!" That prodigal never got home. But I will tell you of a prodigal that did get home. In this country two young men started from their father's house and went down to Portsmouth. The father could comes to the door. He finds out father not pursue his children; for some reason he could not leave home, and so he wrote a letter down to Mr. Griffin, saying: "Mr. Griffin, I wish you would go and see my two sons. They have arrived in Portsmouth, and they are going to take ship and going away from home. I wish you would persuade them back." Mr. Griffin went and he tried to persuade them back. He persuaded one to go. He went with very easy persuasion, be cause he was very homesick already. The other young man said: "I will not go. I have had enough of home. I'll never go home." "Well," said Mr. Griffin, "then if you won't go home I'll get you a respectable position on a respectable ship." "No, you won't," said the prodigal; "no, you won't. I am going as a common sailor; that will plague my father most, and what will do most to tantalize and worry him will please me

THE PRODIGAL RESTORED. Years passed on and Mr. Griffin was seated in his study one day when a message came to him saving there was a young man in irons on a ship at the dock-a young man condemned to death —who wished to see this clergyman. Mr. Griffin went down to the dock and went on shipboard. The young man said to him, "You don't know me, do you?" "No," he said, "I don't know you." "Why, don't you remember that young man you tried to persuade to go home would like to have you pray for me. I have committed murder and I must die, but I don't want to go out of this world until some one prays for me. You are my father's friend, and I would like to have you pray for me."

Mr. Griffin went from judicial authority to judicial authority to get that young man's pardon. He slept not night nor day. He went from influential person to influential person until in some way he got that young man's pardon. He came down on the dock, and as he arrived on the dock with the pardon the father came. He had heard that hisson under a disguised name had been committing crime and was going to be put to death. So Mr. Griffin and the father went on ship's deck, and at the very moment Mr. Griffin offered the pardon to the young man the old father threw his arms around the son's neck and the son said: "Father, I have done very wrong and I am very sorry. wish I had never broken your heart. am very sorry: "Ch," said the father, "don't mention it. difference now. It is all over. I for give you, my son," and he kissed him and kissed him and kissed him. To-day I offer you the pardon of th Gospel-full pardon, free pardon. I do not care what your orime has been. Though you say you have committed a crime against God, against your own soul, against your fellow man, against your family, against the day of judgment, against the cross of Christwhatever your crime has been, here is pardon, full pardon, and the very moment you take that pardon your heavenly Father throws His arms about you and says: "My son, I forgive you. It is all right. You are as much in my favor now as if you had never sinned. Oh, there is joy on earth and joy in heaven! Who will take the Father's embracet

The Population of Kingston Is about 20,000, and we would say at least one-half are troubled with some affartion on the Throat and Lunge, as those complaints are, according to statistics, more numerous than others. We would advise all our readers not to neglect this opportuni ty to call on their draggist and get a bottle of Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs. Trial size free. Large bottle 50c and $1. Sold by all druggist.
