ELDER SHORT'S ORGAN.

The Church in Canada and the Officials Bound to Collect Duty.

Clayton-on-the-St. Lawrence.

"Ten Little Chitons in the Rift," as the tiny house of worship on LaReas Island has been aptly termed, has had no end of vicissitudes, and may have seen more vicissitudes than any other little church on the Islands in the River of Life. It is a mission church, and owes its existence to Rev. Alexander Short, a kind, thoughtful looking man, whose length is striking in contrast to the significance of his name. By industry and faithfulness, he has gathered a little band of devoted members, who worship him, love him, and trust him, and, quoth the saying, "as large as insects." The summer visitors at The Edgewood have from time to time taken a great interest in this little band, and have given them money, Sunday school libraries, church bells, advice, sympathy, and a cabinet of books, to help them in their religious efforts. The named article was the result of the efforts of Mr. Will Carlton, who took up subscription for that purpose and when he went home to Brooklyn last autumn, purchased the instrument and forwarded it direct to the elder. The subscribers to the fund all came back to the river expecting to see the organ, but were disappointed to witness it among the pleasure of '92.

But something seemed to bother the elder, who called pensively up and down the river in his little home-made steamboat, which he burns indiscriminately soft coal, hard coal, wood and kerosene oil. There was a loud demand among the people of Edgewood for a new organ, and the elder, on Saturday, in the name of the new organ should lead the service; and she older felt it, as floated through the air.

At last he explained the situation of things, including Navy and Black.

WANTED TO CAPTURE ADVERTISING, Take Orders and Appoint Agents. Salary per month and all expenses paid, and with a view to getting up a very little fight on the subject. One story has to the effect that Elder Short had the singing on side of the Canadian line and the playing on the other.

But one day this week he was enlivened and cheered in his work by being informed that his son, a young man, had come to him within the year, had climbed into the organ and made up the money for the dues amounting to about one-third of the original cost of the instrument; and the money was soon handed him with which to appose the powers that be and get the music into presentable shape. The story runs that Elder Short, there will be a great present in the small sail, will be led by the man talked of organ. Truly "He maketh the wreath of men to serve Him," and it must be admitted that the elder's little church has by this episode achieved almost a national reputation. It is hoped that this department of the good work will be well sustained by the people, both on and off the river.
