A Reminiscence Here Daily, About half a century ago, W. R. Dick says, the delight of the winter evenings was skating within the foundations of the Regiopolis college building. Where St. Mary's cathedral stands was a pasture with large trees, as much in the country as D. France's farm now is. From West street to Johnson street there was a succession of marshes and li-tle bays. The dry dock lot (the old marine railway) ran out to quite a point, called Massassags, and a lighthouse stood upon it to guide the old time mariner into port.

The pro prietor and his clerk happened to be outside or a few minutes, and during this time some person broke through a small door eading to the bar and secured $5 or $6 left in the till on Saturday night for change Monday morning. There were several satiors in the sitting room, and it is supposed one of these fellows did the job. A Cause For Hilarity. A mariner in a distant port mailed a large amount by registered letter to a Kingstonian. A little later he remembered the unwrote again telling the Kingston consignee to get that letter out speedily. The latter was so pleased at doing this successfully that he called several of the boys in, and it's very hilarious they were after a time. A Gentleman Cadet Was Lively. One of the cadets felt so hilarious over the match on Saturday, that he drank extensively that night and finally wound up in the police station. He was gotten out, however, about midnight and taken to the college in a hack. On a Saturday night two weeks since five or six gentlemen cadets, more or less exhilirated, made themselves conspicuous on Princess street. The college is regaining some of the old time reputation.

Up To Their Tricks. Inspector Glidden says he is "onto" th hotelkeepers who have whistles and such means of signals outside of their hotels to bring into play after hours. He says he entered one hotel, yesterday afternoon, a little sooner than the man on watch expected and heard the whistle blown, Mr. Glidden found signs of the bar having been used shortly before, and is now looking for further evidence to warrant his hauling the Saturday Night Club. On Saturday evening the inaugural meeting of the Saturday night club was held in Queen's university. There was a large attendance and Principal Grant read a synopsis of the paper on the "Wage Question" which he delivered before the Pan-Preabyterian alliance. The subject was discussed by R. T. Walkem, Prof. Short, J. L. Whiting and Prof. Harris. The trend of the debate was that the principal's solution of the matter was only partial and he admitted this. At the next meeting rrof. Short will read a criticism of Mr. Parkin's position on imperial federation.

Death of Thomas Nicholson. Early yesterday morning Thomas Nicholson, ourpenter contractor, University avenue, died after an illness extending over many years. He was born at Penrith, Cumberland, Eug., and came to America in 1832. He settled in Montreal and later removed to Sorel, Que.
