reshest and most readable of quarterlies, the presidential elections, Quay and Hill have an understanding, based on the principles so-called of mutual protection, and that Harrison will be given New York and Pennsylvania provided Harrison will give such pledges this time as will allow Quay York patronage for the next four years. He was apprehended while in the act of "I think," says Mr. Thorne, "shat Harrison has already pledged this." Can it be possible that Harrison has sunk so low as to sell his honor and the honor of the nation for a mess of pottage. The men he is represented to have surrendered to are coliticians who are selfish in their undertakings, who have per sonal ambitions to serve and personal plans to promote, and who have a record which the perfectly pure in heart do not envy. Quay is a tactician who does not worry about the public scaudals, and Hill plays a desperate game when the interests of his party are in jeopardy. Under the circumstances we can appreciate Mr. Thorne's con' clusion that "whether Mr. Harrison or Mr. Cleveland is to be the next president will majority of American sitizane than Bob Ingersol's next atheistic speech will depend or the grace of God.
