RESCUED BY A PREACHER

The Strange Accident and Stranger Good Luck of an Old Lady. A number of delegates to the Pan-Presbyterian council, recently in session at Toroots, went on an excursion to Ningara ters had a chance to show his pluck and nerve. The International bridge is reserved for foot and carriage traffic and affords an excellent view of the river and the waterfall. The iron railings which run along the sides would be sufficient protection for the most reckless or the most unsteady if they were supplemented with FOR CHURCH. some strong wire netting. But as they are now there is a possibility, especially in the case of a child, of a pedestrian falling through the spaces between the bars. This possibility was amply demonstrated by the incident referred to. It was over this bridge that Mrs. Grimason, of Toronto, was passing, accompanied by her two FOR GENTLEMEN, daughters and the Rev. John Ramsey LL.D., of Ballymoney, Ireland. They had occupied the roadway as being safer than the sidewalk-safer to one whose head is easily turned on a height—and as affording a view equally good. The approach of a carriage forced them to the walk. The planks are a few inches higher than the floor of the bridge, a fact overlooked by Mrs. Grimason. She was slightly behind Dr. Ramsey, jumping to the side of the bridge, saw her clinging to one of the iron the others, and in stepping up rather sharp-A Nice Line of Ladies' Silver and Iy her foot caught and she went head first through one of the spaces in the railing. bracings against which she had fallen in Watches in ever variety, both Ameri- her descent. He shouted to her to hold on and he would find aid at once. Her post tion was as secure as the situation would admit of. She had fallen astride of the bar, and thus while her strength and her senses continued she had but to balance herself to keep from falling. To the eyewitnesses of the scene, however, it was one of hopeless horror. It seemed impossible that assistance would reach her in time, as she is a woman of over sixty years, enfecbled by age and by fright. But she clung firmly to a narrow strip of iron, which was all between her and the howling river 170 feet below. How could she preserve her consciousness? How she did retain it during the time taken up in procuring ropes for her rescue she will probably herself never be able to under stand. But if those minutes were full of unutterable terror to her, with what unspeakable horror, with what alternating sensations of hope and despair, with what emotion of anguish were they charged to her daughters!

It was for them a day crowded into ten minutes, but with the expiration of that time came assistance. Mr. Ramsay returned with ropes and assistants, one of whom was the bridge policeman.

The ropes were quickly tied to the bridge, and the reverend delegate, as brave in danger as faithful in his calling, and young and active withal, descended hand over hand to the side of the imperiled woman. A rope passed about her body, under her arms and securely fastened gave ample assurance of her safety. It was not a moment too soon, however. Her strength collapsed as her deliverer reached her, and a few seconds later his labor would have been without results. Several of the excursionists by this time had reached the scene, among them Mr. Harvey, Mr. Nairn. Mr. idugh Blain and Mr. Dalton, and never did these gentlemen pull with more hearty good will than on the rope by which this un fortunate lady was rescued from a watery grave and restored to the arms of her

The strangest part of the whole occurrence, and the part which cannot be explained, is how she fell against the iron bracing. To do so she had to fall in under the bridge. If her descent had been straight nothing could have saved her; and how she chanced to get so far under in such a short distance from where she fell is and must remain a mystery. She was taken to a hotel, but, although suffering from the great nervous shock, she was able to return to Toronto on the excursion train Dr. Causiand after au examination found that she had not been injured physically Rev. Dr. Ramsay, who was the hero of the occasion, is a comparatively young
