MODEL SKIRT. shoulders. Loose wrappers have the waist cut in the same way, with the skirt cut on, but in measuring for a loose wrapper an allowance of six inches longer than it apparently requires should be made at the bottom, and this afterward can be pinned up to come just right, as skirts of wrappers somehow "take up" unexpectedly The side seams must be gored, and a fan of one breadth of the material should be set in with the back seam.

Princess dresses are simply basques with skirts, and by drafting the basque, following the indication of the lines, always allowing any slant to fall backward, a perfect fitting princess will be the result. In a princess the skirt should be long also, and only bemmed or trimmed when the whole is sewn, so that it may not take up and be too short. Riding basques are made on the same lines, with the sole difference of rigid on the cheeks and lips. The most remark. plainness: in trimming, and postilion able and the most perfect of all health giv- backs, which are formed by allowing the back forms to extend longer and the fronts cut shorter than ordinary basques. The little postilions at the back are faced all the way up with the material, and two silk buttons are put at the waist line like those on men's coats. Jackets are cut on the same general lines as the basque, only half an inch larger on every seam, and as much longer as is desired. Pockets can be added or not, and any preferred style of trimming put on. One dart only-the back one-is ever added to jackets. Bone is necessary if one prefers it straight. Blazers are cut in the same general style, but without darts and rather narrower across the chest. The length and width depend upon individual taste. Plain leg o' mutton sleeves. Rows of stitching form the most suitable finish to both blaz ers and jackets. Blouses are cut just like the plain gathered waist, but from the under arm sleeve line they should measure twelve inches and have a plain hem, shelr use, through which is drawn a tape or elastic

Not a wrinkle should form upon the waist. 'Wherevethe seams finish like in a postilion basque. an arrowhead of silk is worked, as also at the corners of pockets. Skirts for tailor gowns are just now cut sheath fashion, with all the fullness in a fan plaiting at the back and with several rows of stitching around the hem of the skirt. They are frequently made without lining, particularly when of serge or cloth, and faced at the bottom. The facing is made of wigan, overlaid with linen, and this again covered with alpaca, all stitched together and faced on like any facing, leaving the edge of the dress next the ground. A narrow braid is put on flat under this. but it does not show from the outside, But with the return of cooler weather linings or foundations will be used, and they can be cut and sewn up with the skirt seams. or separate, as before, in which case the facings and braid go on the lining, and the skirt is bemmed. If stitching is to take a prominent part, a doubled piece of flannel should be laid under the place, and where he goods are stitched the seams show very

No person can do good work without tools, and the home dressmaker ought to have one of those little frames to hang skirts on for the purpose of draping them. The foundation skirt is thrown over it, and the dressmaker wants to fashion a 'wrinkled front." This, simple as it appears, is really the hardest thing to do. The only way to get it right is to take the piece of goods and bring one end up from the floor, where the rest lies, and pin it with the fold to the center of the front at the waist. Then bring the two selvage edges up to the hip waist line and let the wrinkles fall naturally, sticking pins in to hold them until ready to sew them. About three deep plaits on each hip will form, falling forward. The bottom then can be tacked along a basting following the line of the skirt. The top should then be trimmed away, all the while keeping the pins in the plaits, and then hese should be basted and finally sewn down neatly with buttonhole looping. The bottom can then be cut around and finally bemmed or faced, as preferred, and the back draperies or breadths sewn on, but don't let those plaits come undone or

The shaking was so strong that the whole bed shook with him. We became alarmed and sent for a second doctor, who prescribed for the boy and who gave it as his opinion that his recovery was impossible. At this time

Earnest had lost the power of both legs and arms and they had to be tied down to ease the sufferer by lessening the nervous agitation. The second physician called in, attended the boy some time, but the case was etting so bad, every day becoming more This last one said that there was no chance | lie generally :for poor Marnest, and that all the trouble esemed to be in the nerves. I need not tell you how grieved we felt over the prospect of losing our boy, and would have tried anything to save his life. We had been reading in the Post about the wonderful cures made by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and often thought of trying them as we were told they would do no harm if they did not do any good. Nearly every week we read about mirac'es wrought by the Pills, and one day I determined to ask the doctor it we might try them. "Well," he said, 'The like. Shortly after we bought a box of the Pills. This was in May last. L'this Ernest had not been taking them two weeks when we noticed a wonderful change. We quit the doctors medicine altogether, and kept | one application, and most of the contents of using the Pills only. The boy improved an the bottle still remain " rapidly that in a short time he was able to be out of bed. One can hardly believe a story like this, but every word of it is true I tell you there is a wonderful change is our boy and we ought to be thankful to the Pink Pills. Ernest is growing stout and strong, and this is his first day at school, The doctor said he would be dead before the last Toronto exhibition, but my little fellow was so well then that he was able to be around, and even went with his father to the xhibition. We have been buying the Pills from Mr. Stevenson, one of the Orangevilla draggists, and Ernest is still using them alhough not so often as at first. It would not be much out of your way to call at the school, and there you will find Ernest, who will be able to speak for himselt." Ju tas Mrs. Duke was concluding her is toresting narrative the teacher of the school Thomas E Langford, who boards at Mr Duke's, entered the house. It was the dinner hour, and the reporter expected that Earnest would turn up, and save him a visit to the school. He was informed, however,
